DEDICATION

TO

DR. C. E. LINEBARGER

For having wrought long and patiently with us in the interest of truth and knowledge, and for having given some of us to see life as a broader, richer state of being, we respectfully dedicate this, our Annual for 1932.

C. E. Linebarger

FOREWORD

Alma Mater—Soul Mother—
Her Portals Stand Ajar—weather-beaten gray stone portals like the unselfish arms of a true mother who gathers to her breast even the prodigal, and in the shadow of her warm love fosters the best in us. Her Portals Ajar—opening on long vistas shaded by memories of former passers-by and arched over with the ever-living, uneradicable influence of our soul mother who nurtures our immature spirits while they grow. Finally we leave to go down the well-worn path under the gracious arches, through the memory-laden shadows, out another portal which stands ajar—giving on the shining road to the end of the vista.

To the Seniors:

Graduation time is a time for felicitations. I am glad to add my congratulations to those of all your friends. I congratulate you on the personal achievement represented by graduation. I congratulate you on the advantages that you have had that have made graduation possible. But most of all I congratulate you on the great challenge that the world now holds out to you. It is great to be young in these times and face a world so teeming with possibilities and so full of problems. You inherit a great nation committed to the ideals of democracy. But your nation is floundering now because she has not learned how to make the principles of democracy function in all phases of human life. Every one accepts the ideals of democracy in government. You face the great task of reorganizing educational, economic, and industrial affairs so that they too aim at the democratic ideals. No greater challenge has ever come to any generation. We have the natural resources, the man power, the machines, and the technical knowledge necessary to produce enough to keep every citizen in plenty. Yet in the face of all that our whole social system stalls. We need only to learn how to direct these resources to the service of all mankind in order to bring forth a finer condition of human living than the world has ever seen; a cultural democracy from which the misery of poverty is eliminated and in which all have equal opportunity to develop their powers to the fullest extent. Such an ideal state is within your grasp, class of 1932. It challenges the best in you. Will you accept the challenge?

Sincerely yours,

O. Winter

ADMINISTRATION

O. Winter

Mr. Winter

MR. WINTER'S way of managing young people is an understanding and tactful one. It is probably to his intrinsic youth that he owes this understanding. Dignified he certainly is, and yet he is so essentially one of us that we feel no gulf between him and the student body. He understands our problems and helps us solve them—always offering his aid as a friend would. We accepted him whole-heartedly from the start, and since then he has endeared himself to us in a manner which we cannot describe, but which we all feel.

MISS SUDER is everybody's big sister. Humorous, kind, she warms our hearts, and after a talk with her we go away feeling that everything is right because there are women in the world like her. Even a glimpse into that cozy little office of hers is heart-warming—it reflects her so.

NO SCHOOL activity is complete without our Dean of Boys. In fact, we would feel a bit lost if he were not around to advise and help us—from clipping locks to making out programs. Big brother of everyone, his cheerful, humorous badinage is known to all.

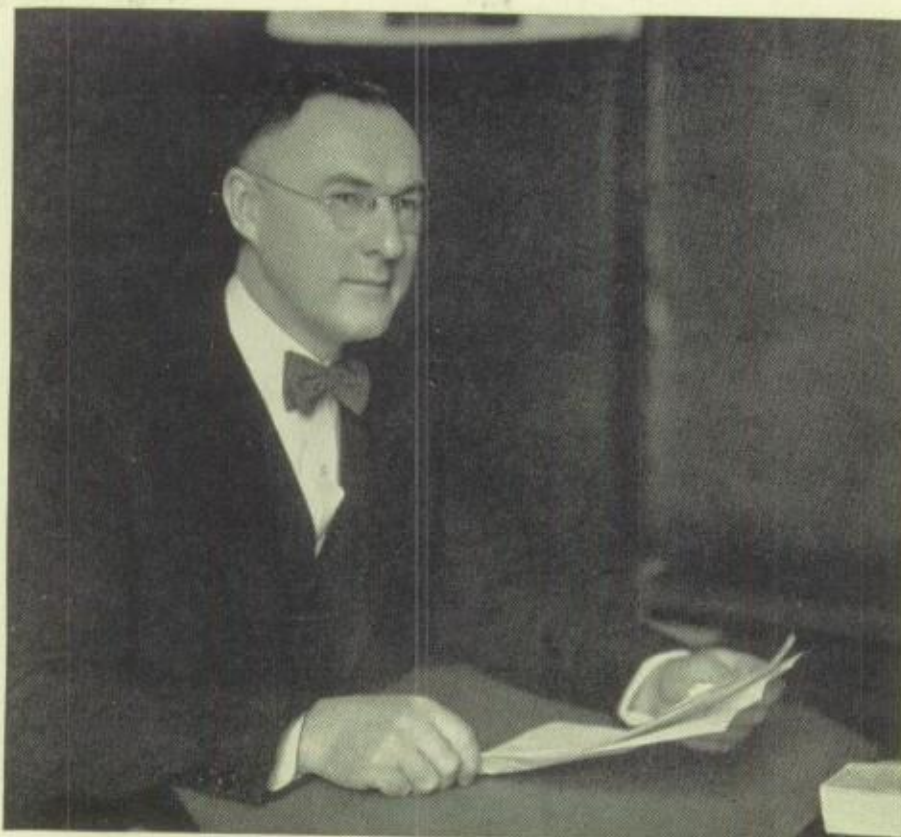

Miss Suder

Mr. Bowen

WE ALL like Mr. Henderson, our assistant principal—we can't help it—it comes naturally, liking a man who has had so much experience with young people, and who likes them so well—oh, yes, we are sure he likes us, for otherwise he would never be so ready to advise or help us whenever he can. He is the kind that makes pupils want to obey and not disobey the rules of the school. He isn't at all stern and forbidding; he's really fun. He has the most quaint way of smiling at one, and the most contagious laugh crinkles we have ever seen.

Mr. Henderson

MISS EIBERG, who inspires in everyone, pupils and teachers alike, a splendid spirit of coöperation, is the student's guide, the student's source of supply for a buoyant, happy high-school spirit. She leads him to better things and in her own gentle way prepares for his higher and more serious education.

MISS MULLIN, the new principal of Greeley, introduces the freshmen of Lake View to high-school life. Her influence upon the students has grown out of their respect of and liking for her as their old friend of the Commercial Department. Keenly interested in boys and girls, she is a tremendous success in her new work.

SONNET

DEAR GOD, was e'er an epic sung to thee
From golden throats, so full of Heaven's song
As that one raised in youthful majesty
When proud to leave our youth we marched along
To take in cap and gown a rolled, white past?
Did not the swelling songs that night break through
The dome of youth and reach the world at last?
Was not each parent stirred within it, too?
No epic ever flowed from off a pen
To mark a greater period in life
Than that which graduates our boys to men
And sends them out to indolence or strife!
But indolence or strife, or joy or pain,
The man in dreams becomes the boy again.

FEBRUARY CLASS OFFICERS

THE SENIOR class is so large that it is necessary to have a representative body to supervise the business of the graduates; the group for this purpose is the class officers. Naturally it is necessary to have an experienced sponsor; this person is Miss Irmagarde Leach. To the class officers should go thanks for the diligence and hard work they have done. To Miss Leach, whose patience and interest are largely responsible for the successful outcome of all Senior Class affairs, should go an equal amount of gratitude.

The Senior Class officers are five in number; president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and sergeant at arms.

The class president was John Menk. His duties were many, but the most important were to take charge of class meetings, to present the class gift at Commencement, and to conduct all class activities. We all agree that John filled his position skillfully.

An equally difficult job is the vice-presidency. To the vice-president falls the entertainment and social work of the class. This year the position was held by a girl, Betty Messner, and well did she show the persistence and ability so renowned in her sex. Hers were the extremely difficult tasks of arranging programs for the class and taking charge of the Class Day Luncheon. These she did in her quiet and capable manner. She was a member of the French and Drama Clubs and last fall a delegate to All City Girls Conference.

At the meeting the secretary sits where all the class can see her. To make it as pleasant as possible for the class, Mildred Morgan was chosen class secretary. Not only did she make the meeting pleasant, but also gave an official aspect. Her secretarial work was efficient and neat, and in every respect she made an excellent official. Among the many activities that gained her support were the Girls Leaders' Class and the Senior Glee Club.

Jerry Klein, or, as he modestly prefers to be called, "The Alexander Hamilton of the Class," was in charge of financial matters. Balancing the budget was one of the tasks he accomplished with more efficiency than does Congress. He has a gold honor pin, and Latin Readers' Club and Latin Games claimed his membership.

The sergeant at arms, or official keeper-of-order, taker-of-attendance, and carrier-of-chairs, was Alex Burger. To his commanding personality the good behavior of the class was attributed. Alex was on the editorial board of the Red and White as well as being assistant editor. He was a member of the Honor Society to the extent of a gold pin.

Once again the officers of the good ship Senior Class under the guidance of its pilot-sponsor have sailed her over calm and stormy seas alike to the safe harbor of Graduation where the map to buried treasure rolled and tied with red ribbon lies anticipating the firm and eager grasp of its owner.

Thus, with such a fine corps of class officers, we are little surprised at the renown the February class has received.

JUNE CLASS OFFICERS

EVERY semester five honorary positions are available to graduating seniors. Those who fulfill them must be, above all, efficient, and as they are elected by popular vote they are always "regular fellows"—well liked by everyone. This year, indeed, the seniors have a right to be proud of their choice of class officers. This group has not been chosen from one field but represents many phases of school life, and all possess the rare attributes of leadership.

Fred Wills, president, has wielded the gavel most effectively throughout the semester. The position of president is not at all new to him, for he has had previous experience as president of the Officers' Club, and he has also been an active member of numerous other clubs. It is his duty to preside over class meetings and to plan activities with Miss Leach.

Muriel Waterfall adds to her laurels another responsible position, that of vice-president. Muriel seems to specialize in that office, for last semester she was vice-president of the Commission. She arranges the entertainment for senior programs, heads the Class Day Committee, and in the absence of the president she presides at the meetings. Her charming personality has been a great asset to the Red and White staff of which she was a member.

The difficult job of handling the class finances is ably taken care of by John Giese. Through his hands has passed the money for the budget, the prom, and rings and pins. He is especially well suited for this position as he is a wizard at mathematics. His membership in the Slide Rule Club is another example of his interest in the science of figures.

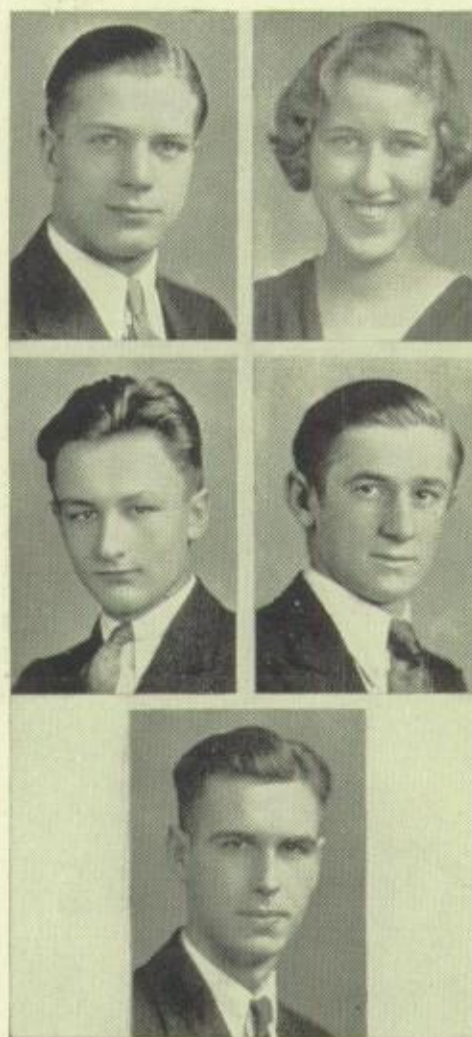

Lawrence Troglia, the secretary, keeps the minutes and all records as faithfully and diligently as he has served on our basketball and baseball teams. Need we say more?

"To insure domestic tranquility," we have Donald Gleason as sergeant at arms. Under his eagle eye the meetings have flourished undisturbed throughout the semester. As chief "bouncer" he has been a great success. He has not limited his success to this, however, for he is also on the Class Day Committee.

From the preceding account we see that the duties of the Senior Class officers are by no means simple. No doubt the hardest duties are the ones that, though they apply to us as well, we too often forget, those of impartiality, cheerfulness, and courtesy. When Lady Fortune has not been kind to us, we invariably treat others rudely and in an unfriendly manner. We as well as future class officers can profit by the example of the officers of the June class of 1932.

In speaking of the senior leaders we find it impossible not to mention Miss Leach, the class sponsor. Her hard work and efforts in our behalf are deeply appreciated by the whole class.

We offer our felicitations to the Senior Class for their fine selections of the officers who led them so splendidly and to Miss Leach for her guidance.

FEBRUARY CLASS SPEAKERS

ONE OF the greatest honors which may be conferred upon four members of the graduating class each semester is their selection as class speakers. Formerly, six speakers were chosen; but because of the length of the program and the increasing number of diplomas to be awarded, this number has been cut to four, making it more difficult than ever to obtain this high position. The four of the February class thus distinguished were: Robert Grumbine, valedictorian, chosen because of his having the highest average of any one in his class; William Ginsberg, salutatorian, selected for having the second highest average; David Patterson, elected by the Senior Class; Marjorie Young, named by the faculty.

Each speaker developed the theme, Education for Leisure, as fully as possible in the six minutes which were allotted to him, pointing out that education and leisure have been intermingled unconsciously since primitive times, and that today when people realize the great value of education they should always be striving to better themselves through good plays, pictures, and books.

In the future machines will more and more do the work of men, who will be obliged to toil only a few hours daily for their bread. The result will be that all people will have many hours out of every twenty-four that they can call their own. The young men and women of today who are far-seeing will prepare themselves to use this time wisely; they will begin to look about for hobbies which are capable of being to them an eternal source of joy and gratification.

Those who find satisfaction in music may become expert in some particular branch of that subject. Those who delight in putting forms and pigments upon canvas may create new masterpieces. Those who derive keen enjoyment from wandering down the paths and side roads of literature may through their own efforts secure an education superior to that of college graduates. There are so many attractive and stimulating ways in which to spend one's leisure time that every high school graduate should pause to consider what use he will make of his free moments.

All four of the speakers have honor pins—three of them gold—but this does not signify, by any means, that their only interest is in scholastic enterprises. Robert Grumbine, while pursuing his General Science course, also found time to be in the R. O. T. C. during his freshman year and to be an ardent supporter of the Chess and Chemia Clubs. William Ginsberg (just to prove that his mathematics did him some good) was a member of the Senior Budget Committee and of the Lake re View staff.

Marjorie Young proved her versatility by serving the Red and White in a two-fold capacity—as an assistant editor of the literary staff and as a member of the art staff, at the same time holding memberships in the Senior Girls' Service Council, the Girl Reserves, and the Art Club.

The Lake re View, the Spanish Club, and the Chemia Club claimed much of David Patterson's time.

Thus we see that the people who chose the theme, Education for Leisure, selected one of which they themselves were most truly representative.

JUNE CLASS SPEAKERS

TO BE chosen class speaker, whether because of scholarship or personality, is always an honor. This June it is especially so because, in accordance with the practice begun last February, there are to be only four speakers, from a larger than average class. The first and second of these, the valedictorian and the salutatorian, are the two students with the highest senior ratings. Of the two other speakers, one is chosen by the faculty and the other elected by the seniors.

This year our valedictorian, Helen Felbinger, one of the youngest ever to attain this honor, is president of the Honor Society as well as an active member of a great many clubs. The salutatorian, John Giese, also a gold pin member of the Honor Society, is vice-president of the Chess Club, and treasurer of the Senior Class. Both he and Helen Felbinger were delegates from Lake View at the Chicago High School Scholastic League.

As their particular speaker the class chose James Ferguson, editor of the Red and White, a member of the Varsity Club, the Public Speaking Club, and the Honor Society. Marian Eck, the faculty choice, is another gold pin member of the Honor Society, with a long list of clubs after her name, among which are the Tennis Club, the Fritz Leiber Club, and the Deutscher Verein. She is also second lieutenant in the Lake View Scout Troop, a member of the Red and White staff, and a former secretary of the Commission.

H. Felbinger
J. Ferguson

J. Giese
M. Eck

WHAT is Practical in Education is the general theme of which each speaker will develop one phase.

The topic of John Giese's speech, to be delivered first, is the Mastery of Fundamentals. As the age in which we live obliges us to do away with all non-essential matters, we must be sure of our fundamentals, for if they are weak, there is no amount of irrelevant things that can bolster them up.

Helen Felbinger chose for her topic Understanding Human Relations. Education helps to solve the problem which is closest to us—that of our relationship to our fellow human beings. It is true that education enables nations to handle their international affairs more wisely, but to us the problem of adjusting ourselves to our environment is more important.

Knowledge Gained by Experience and Observation is to be Marion Eck's subject. Nature teaches much which we can learn by watching spring unfold into summer, and summer give way to autumn, which, in turn, surrenders to winter. As observing the seasons is apt to imbue us with a sense of fatalism which must be avoided, we revert to studying our surroundings—people, machines, buildings, and so forth—and we balance our book-learning by tangible things.

Inasmuch as our age is a mechanical one, we are always in danger of becoming dull and getting into a rut. When a man sits for hours before a machine, working one lever, he is not usually physically or mentally tired, but merely a bit dazed by the monotony. Education and an appreciation of the arts could do away with this condition; for the educated worker would have something to think of, to enjoy—a piece of music, a book, a visit to a picture gallery. James Ferguson will speak upon this phase of the work of education.

TWO-YEAR GRADUATES

THE students now graduating from the two and three-year courses comprise only a small part of those who started their high school education a few years ago. Of the two-year pupils many will return to finish a third and even a fourth year, and a good percentage of the three-year pupils will return also.

The two and three-year courses train the pupil to take his place in the business world, and if he is ambitious, to forge steadily ahead. The Commercial Course includes a study of English, science, history, geography, civics, a choice of electives, and the usual commercial subjects. Every semester the program varies slightly, and the subjects included in the entire course are so different that the student is bound to study at least one or two subjects in which he is vitally interested. This relieves the monotony of the course of study chosen and also allows the pupil to obtain a general knowledge of problems which will confront him later in life. Thus, when the two or three-year pupil leaves school, he has a foundation on which to build his further academic and business education.

The social life in high school is undeniably important to the student. There are so many clubs that no matter what his interest is it can be satisfied. Whatever he does after graduation, he has derived something priceless from his high school life; he has a feeling of having accomplished something worthwhile when he is handed a diploma. One lesson he masters is that no matter how much he learns, there is always something more to be learned, just as in life there is always one rung higher.

ACTIVITIES

COMMENCEMENT

SAYING good-bye; to an old brick building, to a tin locker, to a chalky class room.

Saying good-bye: to a friendly library, a vigorous gymnasium, a pulsating assembly hall, a soft-footed office.

Saying good-bye: to the many gaited halls, to capricious fountains, to hand-polished banisters.

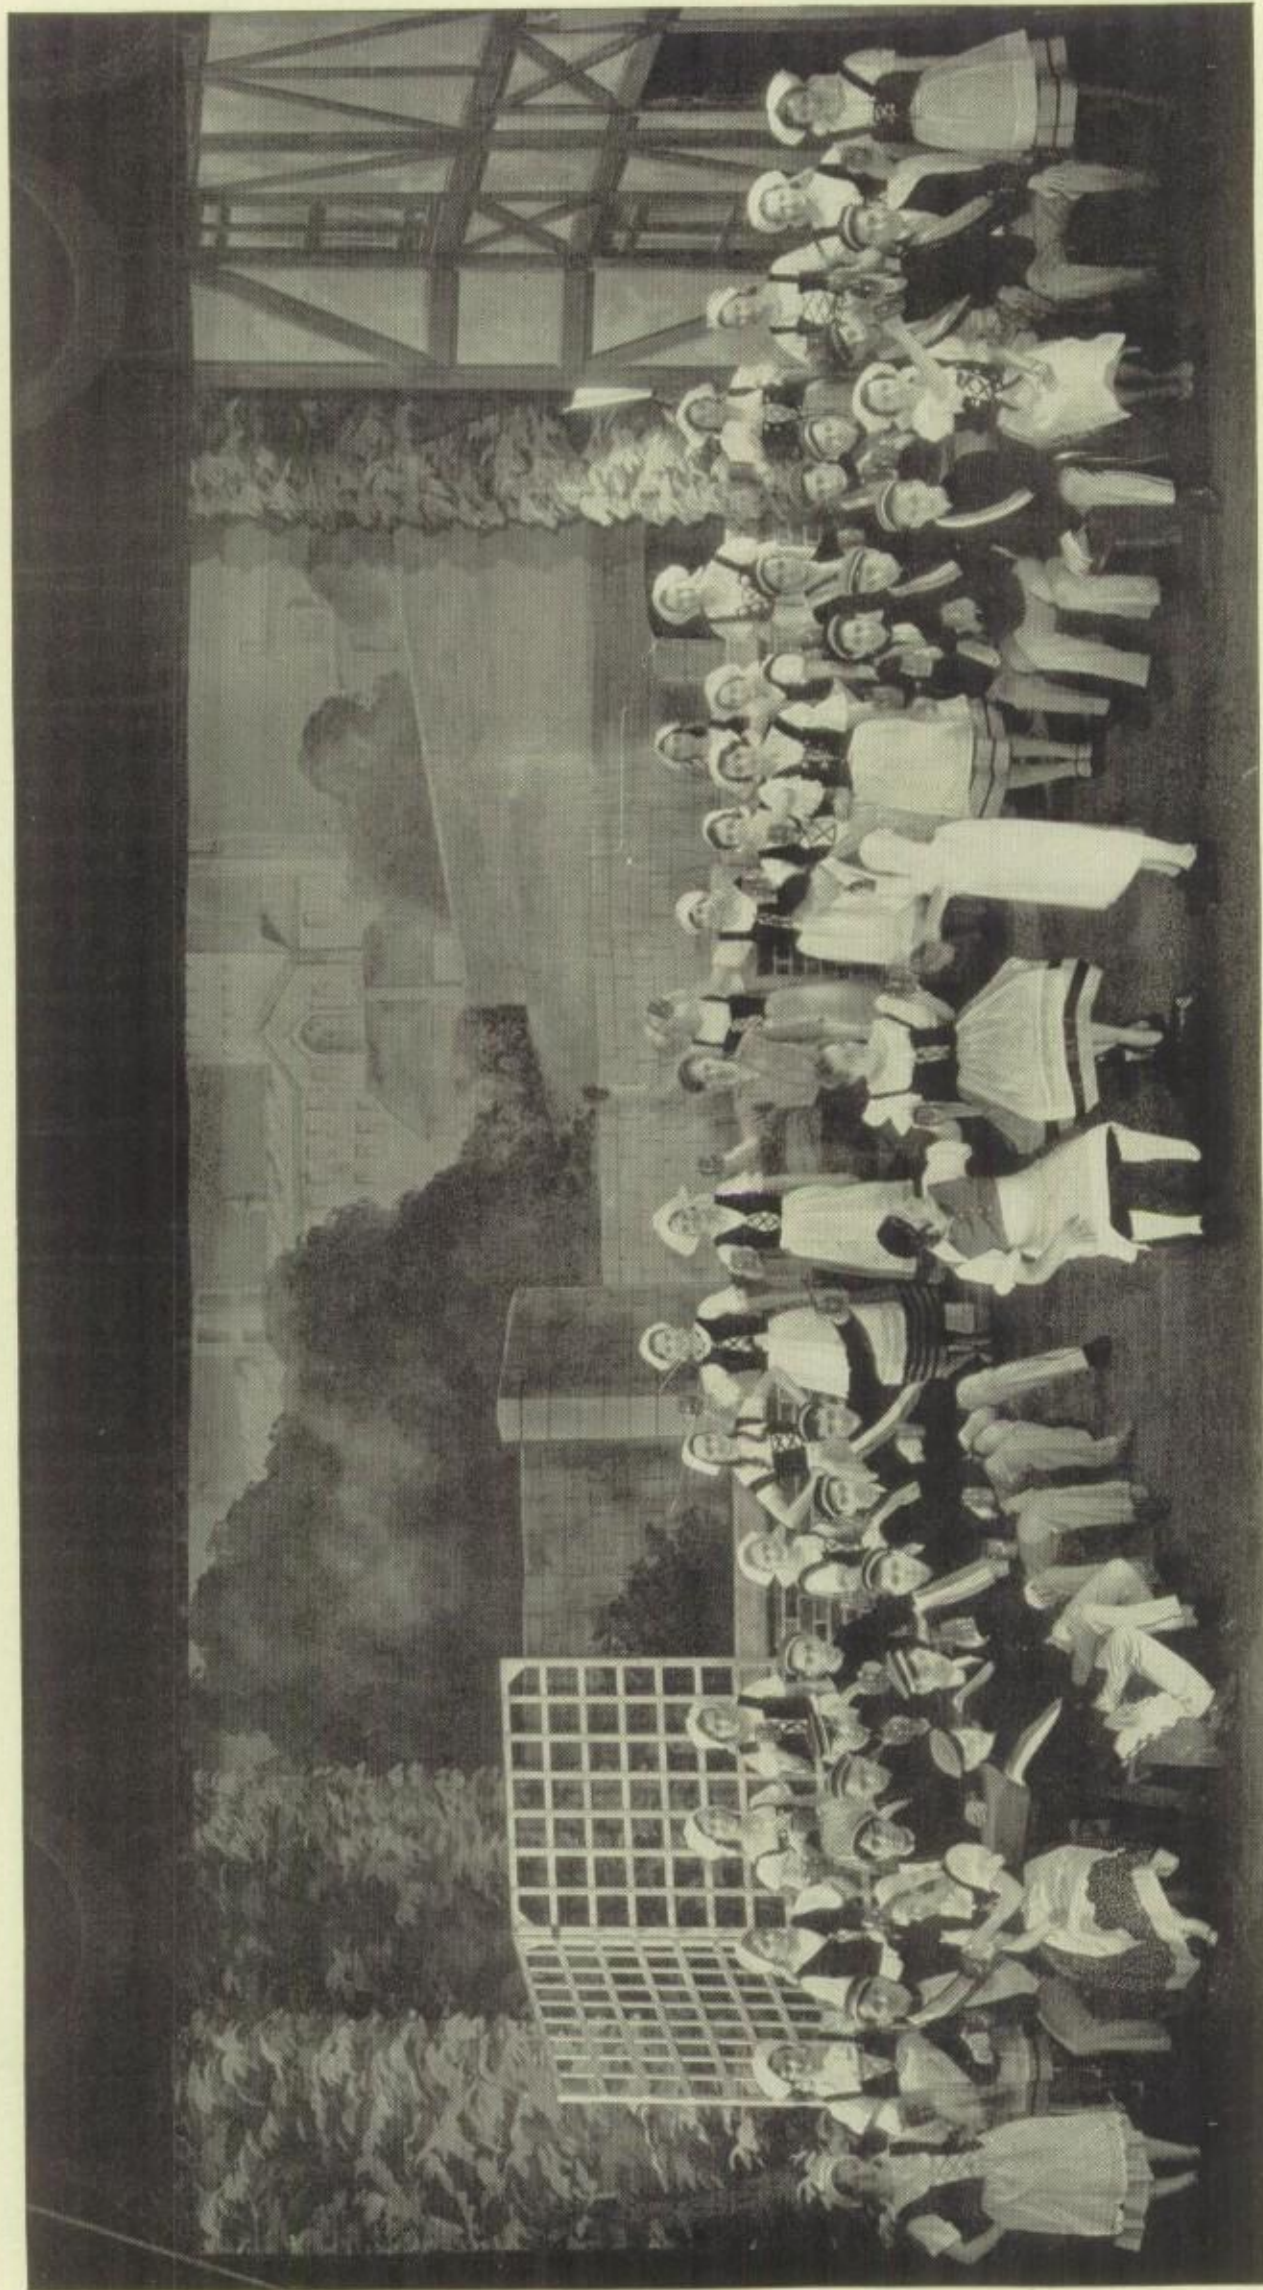

Saying good-bye: to a teacher, to a friend, to a club, to a small world.

Saying good-bye: to all this; but taking with us treacherous sighs.

Saying good-bye: to all this; but taking with us memories, contacts, hopes and ideals.

Saying good-bye: to the shell but taking with us the soul.

SENIOR GLEE CLUB

AS A RESULT of much hard work, the Senior Glee Club has covered itself with glory during the past semester. It first met with success at Orchestra Hall, where the North Side Senior glee clubs competed in the annual Choral contest. The evening of the festival was a gala night for the Lake Viewites, and the "Glee Clubbers" were thoroughly confident that they would win, because every member was determined to put forth his best effort. The selections of our school were begun by the quartet: Alfred Georges, tenor; Robert Corbett, bass; Russell Marks, baritone; Robert Holly, tenor. Next, in contrast to the somewhat heavy similarity of the selections of the other contesting organizations, the Glee Club rendered the gay lyrics of Dorothy Donnelly and the lilting music of Heidelberg students.

Lake View's rating was perfect, and the entire student body was delighted with the distinguished place that the Glee Club attained.

The next venture, The Student Prince, given as the annual operetta, was a most beautiful presentation. It was performed in Lake View's auditorium for three successive nights. The Student Prince is a story of German royalty and of a prince from an old family who rebelled against the restrictions of court life. Karl Franz, the Prince of Karlsberg, is given a vacation at Heidelberg, under the supervision of Dr. Engle. Lutz, the valet, and Hubert, the valet of the valet, supply the comic relief, and Gretchen, the barmaid, is also a humorous character.

Karl Franz falls in love with Kathie, the inn-keeper's niece, and at the same time, preparations for his betrothal to Princess Margaret are being made in Karlsberg. Just as Kathie and Karl Franz are to elope to Paris, he is called back to his home because of his grandfather's illness. Karl Franz becomes king and his marriage to the princess is inevitable. Kathie marries an old sweetheart, and Karl Franz learns to love the princess. The plot is not especially original, but the exquisite scenery and the beautiful singing give it a unique atmosphere.

The production won laurels not only for the cast but also for Mrs. Smith, the sponsor, whose undying enthusiasm has led the Glee Club through many seasons. As a token of appreciation for what she has done, Mrs. Smith was presented with an attractive gold medal, the design on which is a lyre and a baton. This tiny disk, which Mrs. Smith wears on a chain around her neck, bears the following inscription:

"Presented to Dora G. Smith
by George H. Spies
In recognition of her splendid success with the L. V. H. S. Orchestra and Glee Club in The Student Prince.
1932."

Great was the rejoicing of the whole school when Mrs. Smith received this appropriate token.

LAKE RE VIEW

Editor RUTH HELLER
Associate Editors..... LA VERNE KOCH, HAZEL PIETSCH

THE Lake re View, a weekly newspaper published by a student staff, is every way a democratic activity. Membership on its staff is open to any pupil who maintains a creditable standard in his school work. It gives an opportunity to everyone who wishes to test his skill in writing and in art. The record of its reporters, poets, typists, columnists, artists, editors, and business managers justifies this purpose of the paper.

Its chief aim is to serve the school. It gives the news of all activities impartially; has printed the semester program schedules and courses of study; issued special editions for operas and dramas; promoted community and civic projects, such as P. T. C., Clean-Up, Youth Week, and Health Programs; and through all these endeavors it attempts to reflect and guide student attitude and opinion, and to develop that elusive quality—School Spirit.

In return, this splendid school spirit supports the Lake re View and enables it to operate without resort to advertising. The entire paper is filled each week with school news and the literary work of the students. Its treasury always carries a modest surplus, which is available for worthy school projects.

THE RED AND WHITE

FOR over forty years, the students of Lake View High School (not the same ones) have worked on their magazine, the Red and White, with the astounding zeal found only in boys and girls searching for diversion from their daily school work. Many young people have an intense desire to be famous athletes, many find themselves attracted to a profession, and still others have a distinct craving for writing breath-taking news, sentimental poetry, fiery editorials, or stories, anything that is writing. The smell of print, the excitement of completing something worth-while, the thrill of busy publication offices, the opportunity for real adventure into the land of thought, all these help to make up the life of an absorbed journalist.

Those who are members of the Red and White staff have found, on a small scale, some of the rapture in the world of writing. It has been their opportunity to reach into parts hitherto unknown to them, to travel the roads of romantic thought, to dream in expectation of greater things to come. With all the new activities brought into view, they naturally become eager to learn more of the interesting, but mysterious, forces at work in the world.

Although the Red and White is an extra-curricular activity, it contributes much to the education of boys and girls by developing their minds and teaching them to feel and love the glamor of words. A student learns to develop the smallest seed of an idea into a more tangible form that inspires others to reach for goals for which they might not otherwise have striven.

Aside from the educational development that results from this work, there is a joy that comes from few other things. Seeing one's own ideas in print gives one new self-assurance that many people attain only with difficulty. These amateur writers also experience the friendship of other boys and girls who are interested in the same work that claims all their time and much of their thought.

The high caliber of our magazine has been recognized by press associations of many kinds. Since 1925 the Red and White has won first place, Class A, in the Columbia Scholastic Press Association Contest, and the All-American Honor Rating from the National Scholastic Press Association.

The Red and White office with its office desks, typewriters, roomy Windsor armchairs, heavy carpet, sunny atmosphere (when the sun shines) is a veritable trophy room. On one desk is a silver cup won in 1927 from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association; on the walls are several bright felt pennants, among them two awards from the Illinois State High School Press Association in 1925 and 1926. All these awards reveal the excellent quality of work the Lake View High School students turn out. This semester all the departments of our magazine were given by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association an unusually high rating of 895 points out of a 1000. The Red and White would have been awarded the only medal given if it had gained five more points.

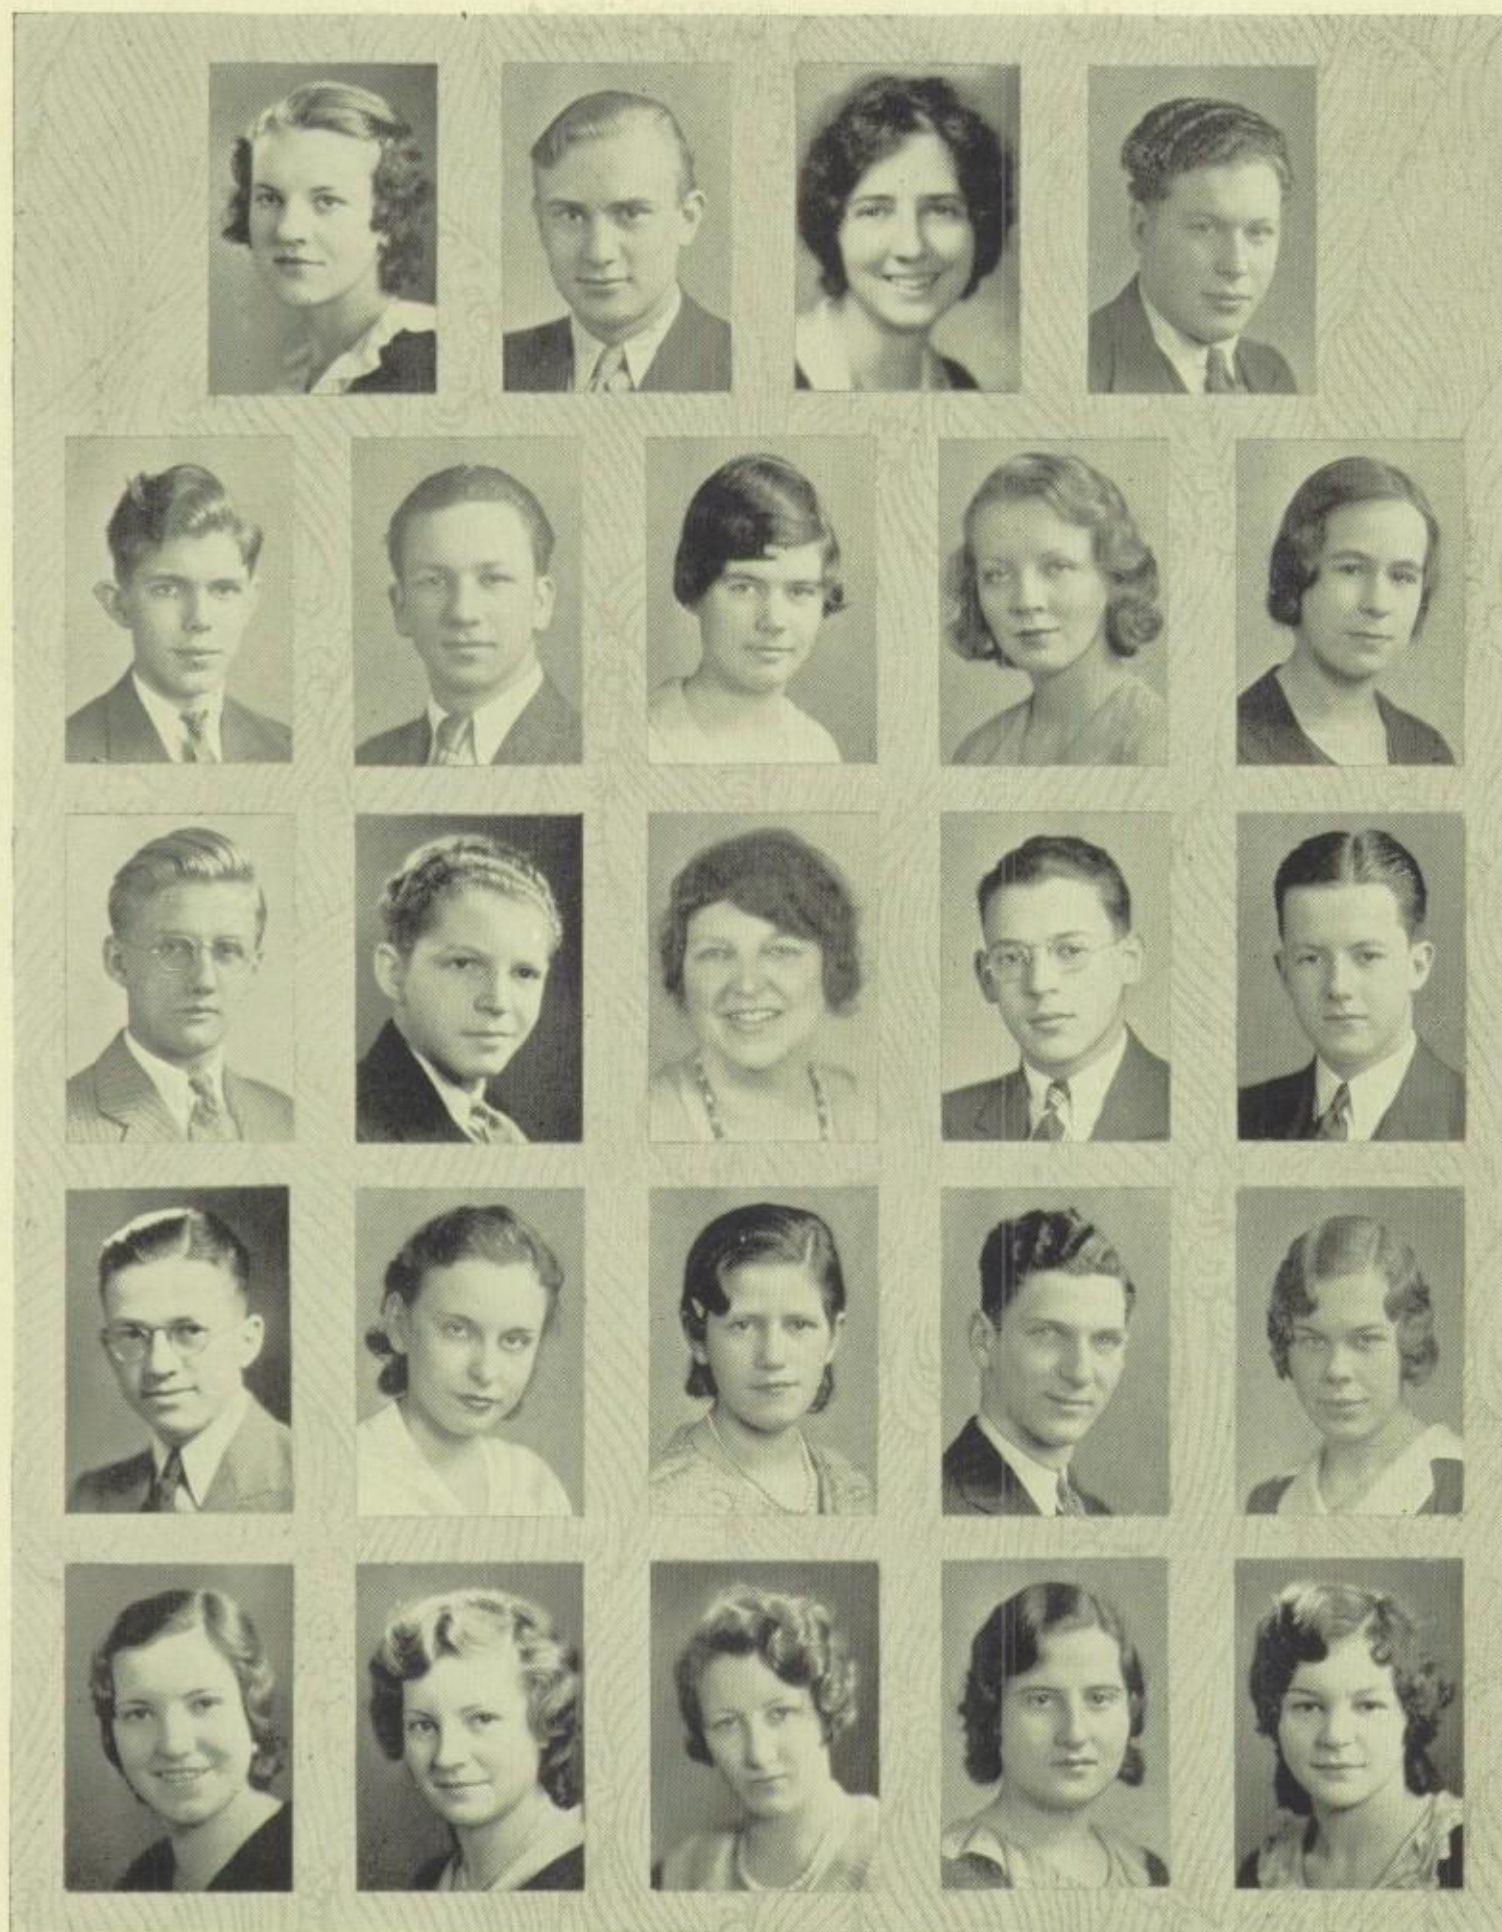

This Annual was indeed an interesting project as well as a strenuous one. Month after month members of the staff and the sponsors sacrificed their leisure hours after school to work on the book, and in doing so had a series of novel experiences. After being locked in once, with the necessity of trooping gingerly down the fire escape, they have become more careful. The staff worked during spring vacation, using the cooking room in which to prepare their meals. Many times when they stayed late there were no lights so that they must needs slave by yellow candle-light. The companionship and jolly times, however, were well worth the time the staff gave to the Annual, and—they hope you like it.

These fellows like to win cups and shields; won a class "E" rating in the annual City Band Contest, too. Growing bigger and better every year.

Band

CAPTAIN WALZ, who has been the Wildcat bandmaster since the fall of 1928, is especially fitted for such a position as he now holds. He attended grammar school in Chicago and Milwaukee, and then went to Western Springs Military Academy. In a fife, drum, and bugle corps he became familiar with these well-known martial instruments, and at the age of eleven he studied the cornet. During the war he served in France as assistant band conductor in the 118th Field Artillery. He attended the Vandercook College of Music; later he had much experience in bands and theater orchestras, which made him thoroughly familiar with all symphonic band instruments. Since coming to Lake View he has accomplished tasks which are hardly equalled in schools having more than one bandmaster.

Capt. L. D. Walz

When he came here in 1928, he found a band system composed of a concert band of about fifty players and a second band of eighteen players. Recruiting was begun at once; a beginners' class was organized at Ravenswood Branch, and four classes were started at the main building. There are now more than eighty members in the concert band and the second band numbers sixty. There are the intermediate and the beginners' bands at the main building, and the beginners' bands at both Ravenswood and Greeley branches, each containing nearly fifty enthusiastic musicians.

The band is organized on a strictly military basis as a part of the Lake View R.O.T.C.; military uniforms are worn, and one day of every week is devoted to drill either in the R.O.T.C. room or outside. Squads are formed, and officers are chosen as a result of examinations in both musical and military subjects.

Sixteen shields in the band room testify to the prowess of the bandsmen. Among them are Daily News trophies for first place in class B in 1924, for first place in class A in 1928, for being champions in 1929, for winning the Chicago District Championship in 1926, and for placing first among group bands in 1930 and 1931. In the trophy case at the Irving Park Boulevard entrance is the Tribune Cup which was won in marching competition with other Chicago bands last spring.

Concerts and contests come with steady frequency. A concert was given every semester in the auditorium in collaboration with the Orchestra and Glee Club until this spring. In former years the proceeds have helped furnish new music and needed repairs on instruments not privately owned.

Last February Moritz Rose won first place on the drum in the solo contest, and Richard White placed second on the oboe. Four other Lake View boys entered the finals, but achieved only two fourth and two fifth places.

This year's concert band was one of the four North Side bands selected to enter the finals of the Chicago area contest. Places were not awarded this year, but Lake View was given a rating of Excellent. The band holds about the same position that it did last year, having taken fourth place from several large bands. The second band entered a smaller group and was rated Very Good, which really is very good, considering that it was pitted against several concert bands. No definite places were awarded in this contest. The second bandsmen gained much useful experience from their contest and from the long hours of practice that preceded it, all of which will make for a finer concert band next year.

R. O. T. C.

"OFFICERS, attention," and then the meeting of the R. O. T. C. Officers' Club is called to order by Cadet Captain Melvin Koral, President. The social side of the R. O. T. C. work is represented by this body, one of whose outstanding accomplishments is the annual Cadet Hop. This club is one of Lake View's most exclusive organizations, since it is limited to commissioned officers.

The club meets once a month at the home of the various members. The topics of importance in the administration of the unit are discussed. Then rations are apportioned and the boys gossip while "gedunking."

Among the school's "Who's Who" that are members of the club are William H. Thompson, vice-president of the Commission, who was the president of the club last year; Fred Wills, class president, who resigned as president of the club to take over his duties in the class, and Robert C. Peterson, who is the vice-president of the Honor Society.

On the evening of March 28 the club held its semi-annual installation ceremony. Twenty-one new officers were installed.

At present the club is working on the possibility of holding another Cadet Hop to be given just before the close of school.

COMPANY "A" this semester has perhaps aroused more interest than any of the other companies of the regiment. There are eighty-four cadets attached to it, the largest enrollment in recent years. Because of this, it has been divided into three platoons, a division which makes the drill more complicated and consequently more interesting than the usual drill with two platoons. This is the first time since the New Experimental Drill has been established that a company has ever consisted of more than two platoons.

ONCE MORE Company "B" has had a successful semester. The enrollment for this year showed an increase of about twenty per cent over that of last year. The New Experimental Drill has proved quite as successful with these cadets as with those in the other companies, and, by virtue of their coöperation with the company's officers, the cadets have practically mastered the drill and theoretical work.

THIS semester the rifles went to Company "C." The cadets of this company had the responsibility of learning the manual of arms, and the use and care of the rifle in addition to the regularly prescribed training course. In spite of the extra work, the co-operation of the cadets with the officers has kept the company on top in the regimental rating.

AT PRESENT Company "D" has the largest aggregation of military talent that it has ever had since its organization a few years ago; in fact, it is now the second largest company in Lake View's Regiment. This gain in membership is an example of the speed with which this great movement is spreading through the student ranks. Those who come to mock, stay to march, and the increasing numbers of the sons of Mars would seem to prophesy universal membership for this movement in the future.

HONOR SOCIETY

CONTRARY to one's expectations, after one makes a hasty perusal of the requirements for membership in the Honor Society of Lake View High School, one finds those wearing its emblem of honor are not few and far between. There is an extremely large percentage of Lake View's students who have not found it difficult to keep the continuous average of E or better. A sum of twenty-four points is required for membership—eight points for S, six points for E, three for G, and one each for perfect records of attendance and punctuality.

A bronze pin inscribed with the word "Honor" is awarded for one semester's work netting twenty-four points. If one retains this pin for three semesters, one exchanges it for a silver pin; and after one has kept the silver one for two semesters, he exchanges it for the permanent badge of gold.

It is from this gold-pin group that the officers are chosen. These officers are students who have accumulated the greatest number of scholastic points during their school career.

There are sixty-two members in the gold pin group: Golda Altschul, Harold Alwart, Ethel Andersen, Evelyn Barutzke, Jean Beecher, Helen Bergquist, Losey Bergquist, Charles Bower, Dorothy Charleston, Ruth Claesson, Frank Cotterman, Marian Eck, Helen Felbinger, Arlene Freese, Belle Gaffin, Norton Gerber, Celeste Gianakopulos, John Giese, Jerome Goldstein, Helen Granroth, Peter Groo, Brandon Hanck, Montineer Harlem, Carl Hedblom, Roberta Hinegardner, Ruth Heller, Henry Hill, Adele Jenks, Arthur Kasdorf, Virginia Kitz, Margaret Kokonas, Caroline Korr, Herbert Krauss, Regina Kunst, Robert Lyons, Dorothy Maurer, Margaret Michael, Elizabeth Noble, Hubert Odishaw, Robert C. Peterson, Ruth Pipenhagen, Anna Mae Schmidt, Rosalie Steiner, Aletha Tegerdine, Muriel Waterfall, Edna Wegner, Fred Willis, Elizabeth Boyer, Jack Buerstetta, Alex Burger, Burton Carpenter, Ruth Cohen, Kenneth Dunn, Irene Edmondson, William Ginsberg, Jerome Goldstein, Robert Grumbine, Raphael Holmbo, Jerome Klein, Lillian Rommel, Lena Scolli, Mary Trimmier, and Marjorie Young.

This list of names contains a galaxy of stars who shine in multitudinous planes of activity. Among them we find four commissioners, two R. O. T. C. officers, three class officers, five editorial members of school publications, eight Senior Girl Service Council members, and four noted athletes. This seems to prove conclusively that one can have an excellent scholastic record without denying himself the extra curricular activities and that he can make a success of himself in other lines as well as in the regular classwork.

THE SENIOR GIRLS SERVICE COUNCIL

FOR another year the Senior Girls' Service Council has carried on its silent service in behalf of the school. As there were only six "redjackets" who returned to school in the fall, seventeen new members were introduced into the activities of the group. This spring the membership of the organization was reduced to seventeen.

The main activity of the councillors was, as usual, the entertainment of the sophomore girls in the annex of the girls' gym. The purpose of these parties was to acquaint the sophomores with the councillors in order to promote a spirit of friendliness between the two classes and to make the sophomores feel more at home in Lake View.

The "redbirds" spent some of their free periods in the Dean's room, running errands for Miss Suder, the sponsor of the organization.

Before Christmas the council made an appeal to the school for candles to send to Northwestern Settlement to be distributed among the poor families in the district.

The girls also helped the 2B's entertain the incoming sophomores by giving a little play written by one of the Council girls, and by taking them on a personally conducted sight-seeing tour of the entire building so that they won't feel entirely lost next semester.

FALL COMMISSION

THE HEIGHT of social activity at Lake View is reached each semester in the selection of the Commission. The students choose six seniors whom they wish to have as a medium between themselves and the faculty—for that is the main purpose of the Commission. Besides this, they take charge of the special activities to which each is assigned, and help with the sale of tickets for the opera, the senior drama, and other social events of the school.

The president of this semester's Commission was the very popular Mr. Theodore H. Hoffman, Junior (Ted to most people), who had many activities of which to boast before he added this last feather to his much be-feathered cap. He was a member of the Glee Club, the soccer team, the cheer-leading squad, and the Letter Club.

Muriel Waterfall, who was vice-president, also has had her share of activities, among which have been the Readers' Club, the Glee Club, Ye Playe Shoppe, and the Red and White. She is also well acquainted with the swimming pool.

The private secretary of the "company" was Marian Eck. "Commissioning" seems to be her real hobby; she was also on the Greeley Commission. She was a member of the German Club and the Red and White staff, and has a swimming emblem.

Robert W. Lyons (yes, that's the same as the well known Bob Lyons) had charge of student welfare. Before that he seemed to have a "president complex," for he was the leading officer in the Greeley Science and the Chemia Clubs, and he was the captain of the Golf Team.

If one wished to find out anything about athletic affairs he was promptly referred to Peter Groo. This likable chap has an athletic record that would convince anyone that he deserved the post. He has been captain and co-captain of the light and the heavyweight basketball teams, respectively, and a member of the Golf and Letter Clubs.

The two very successful dances which were given during the semester may be attributed largely to the efforts of Dorothy Hammond, who had charge of social activities. She was also busy with the Girl Reserves and the Spanish Club.

The Commission plan of student government, an experiment that has been carried on in Lake View High School for the past few years, has proved very successful. The administration of our school believes that the student body, as far as possible, should be self-controlled, self-directed, and not policed by the teachers. Since our government is a democracy, and since it will be our duty to make and administer the laws of the country when we are of age, we need all the experience we can get.

Through the electing of commissioners, we are learning to weigh the qualities of candidates and to choose them carefully. The six people whom we elect are being trained in the administration of matters that concern the welfare of many people, and are doing work that covers a wide range of activity.

JUNE COMMISSION

ONE OF THE highest and most important positions attainable in Lake View is the Commission. Six of the most prominent students, three boys and three girls, are elected to it every semester by the popular vote of the student body. This Commission is a group representative of the students and makes itself vital by linking more closely together the pupils and the faculty.

As with any other important position, this, too, has its qualifying requirements. First, boys or girls wishing to become a commissioner must have a petition signed by at least twenty-five students. Then, after their past scholarship record and general work have been approved, they speak in their own behalf before the assembly. The last step, voting, is left to the students, who usually mark the ballots in a hasty but thoughtful manner.

It is the wise, witty, and well-liked student that is rewarded with a commissioner's pin. The six elected this semester were a bright-eyed, illustrious group of Lake View's élite. Dorothy Caraty was president; William H. Thompson, vice-president; Betty Chrisman, secretary; Constance Ross, director of social activities; Paul Wilbur, commissioner of athletics; and Nick Gavares, clean-up commissioner.

All of the Commissioners have been very active in school life. Dorothy Caraty, first girl president of Lake View's Commission, has supported the dramatics and Readers' Clubs and has been on the Red and White. Although Bill Thompson was an officer of Ye Playe Shoppe and founder and president of the Fritz Leiber Club, his most extensive activities have been in the R. O. T. C. Betty Chrisman, whose clever art presentation you surely remember, is quite talented in that field. Her activities include the Art Club and the Girl Reserves. Paul Wilbur's position on the Commission is appropriate as he possesses a football letter. Constance Ross's penchant is also drama. She is a clever tap dancer as well as an athlete. Nick Gavares is a basket-ball man and a member of the Lake re View.

Mr. Winter once said, "The Commission is given the great responsibility of keeping students alive to the Lake View ideals of coöperation, service, and wholesome social life"—and our commissioners have certainly carried out each one of these duties.

Little have we realized the time these six commissioners have devoted to their tasks: they have spent long hours in working for the betterment of the school. Their first problem was the raising of money for the soap and towel fund, later selling tickets for the Opera, and then for athletic games. "Clean-up" week, the vocational conferences, support of the Red and White and the Lake re View, and numerous other activities also occupied their attention. They "clicked" on all of them and sent them over with great success.

Now, after learning what a great part they play, let us try to help future Commissions by doing our share as good citizens. Let us aid them by our coöperation to undertake ever greater tasks in the future.

MISS GLOMSKI

LONGFELLOW in one of his poems said of music that it was "writ in the language spoken by angels." To the lover of music, such a description seems more adequate than the ones usually given in dictionaries and those of which we most often think. There are many who would not appreciate such a statement, but more and more we are beginning to see the beauty of music.

To make us realize to the full extent this charm and beauty, we have musical instructors, schooled in the art, who endeavor to bring out any latent qualities that we may have. At Lake View we have been fortunate in securing a leader who really knows how to work successfully with high school pupils. This teacher is Miss Glomski.

Miss Glomski

Miss Glomski is, as she says, "a Chicago product." She came to us from the J. Monroe Grammar School, the Tuley High School, and the Chicago Normal College. It seems to us that she has quite an astounding number of degrees,—the Bachelor of Philosophy, which she obtained from De Paul University, and the Bachelor of Music and Master of Music from the Chicago Musical College. She has also attended the Northwestern University School of Music.

From Miss Glomski's education we may proceed to the time when she undertook the education of others. Her first endeavor was made at Medill High School, where she proved her capability. For two years she worked with the students there, during this time directing three operas, Pinafore, Little Almond Eyes, and The Hermit of Hawaii.

At this time her path turned and she came to Lake View, where she has been now for six years. During all this time, besides instructing students with such a marked degree of excellence, she has won four gold medals for her superior piano work, and has become a valued member of the faculty of the Chicago Musical College, where she teaches Piano and Theory.

With such an active life outside of school, one might wonder how she could ever attain success in Lake View, but her immense classes and the students she turns out are ample assurance of her capability. At our school Miss Glomski has accompanied the singers in three operas, The Mikado, Chimes of Normandy, and Mignon. At present her activities include the Piano Class, the Sophomore Girls' Glee Club, and the Sophomore Boys' Glee Club, and goodness, what strong voices some of her pupils have! Miss Glomski has trained many boys and girls and helped them to become fine singers. Three of her students, Mae Curtis, Lucille Jenkins, and Charles Merchant, were chosen to sing in the North Side division of the vocal contest, sponsored by the Chicago Council of Singing-Teachers.

Miss Glomski believes that music is a fundamental in education, not an extra activity, and we quite agree with her. Someone has said, "Music is our fourth great material want—first, food, then raiment, then shelter, then music." Surely, however, we think a man can live without music; but so large a part of our lives is of necessity spent in a rush and grind which almost inevitably dulls our finer sensibilities, that we owe it to ourselves to take time for those things which make for relaxation and for uplift. And among these uplifting agencies, Music certainly ranks with the first. It makes no attempt to instruct us, to put facts before us. It simply appeals to our love for the beautiful, and excites in us emotions of pleasure.

"MUSIC washes away from the soul the dust of everyday life," said Auerbach. Playing the piano is an art one can always look back to with pleasure. Music is one of the most delightful methods of self-expression, or outlets of emotions and feelings.

As the sponsor of this group, Miss Glomski has endeavored to give each member a more complete understanding of music. The great works of the famous composers who have contributed beauty, rhythm, and fine technique to the musical world have been placed before the pupils as the highest examples of this art.

The piano class is now ending its fifth semester of successful work. It is divided into three groups: beginners, intermediate, and advanced. The beginners' group studies the primary technicalities which arise in the simple, attractive pieces studied. The intermediate group is more free to select pieces in accordance with the talents of the individual members.

The achievements of the class merit the encouragement of its continuation in future semesters. It aims not only to give a general knowledge of the instrument, but also to enable the student to choose works of genuine worth from many compositions, both classical and modern.

"WE CANNOT have too much music; we need it—the world needs it—probably more now than ever before."—Warren G. Harding.

This semester the fourth hour Sophomore Girls' Glee Club had a membership of more than one hundred. There was an unusual number of excellent, well-trained voices distinguished for their lyric quality.

The girls in this Glee Club have developed a high appreciation of music this year by attending concerts, by hearing the famous stars whom they would not otherwise have heard, and by their own study of the great composers and their compositions.

During this year the club sang on two radio programs, for several assemblies, and for the commencement exercises of the two-year graduates.

The songs used were Barcarolle from Tales of Hoffman by Offenbach, O Solo Mio by Padua, Wanderer's Night Song by Rubenstein, Hark! The Vesper Hymn by Stevenson, Friendship by Bach-Gounod, Then You'll Remember Me from the Bohemian Girl, and Oh, So Pure from Martha.

Any one will admit that the above selections signify a great deal of work and that any glee club should be content to rest on such laurels. This organization of Lake View's music groups has had a most enjoyable and successful year.

“MUSIC, one of the fine arts of the world, has been the most beautiful medium of expression since the advent of culture,” said Contone.

With this quotation in mind, the Sophomore Boys’ Glee Club, under the direction and sponsorship of Miss Glomski, met this semester in room 214 during the fifth period. The coöperation of the boys aided Miss Glomski in the organization of this group. Among the songs that were learned during the semester were: The Volga Boatman, Oh, Susanna, Cradle Song, Music in the Air, Oleander Time, and Vive L’Amour.

All business was conducted by the officials of the club, who carried out the meetings according to regular routine. Thus, they not only excelled in singing, but also gained experience in leadership and in performing civic duties.

According to the tone levels of their voices, these singers were divided into four groups: first tenor, second tenor, first bass and second bass. The club participated in a concert of selected songs over the radio through Station WCFL.

In all, the Glee Club had a most successful year, and we hope that many of the members may continue good work in some field of music.

THE Girls' Glee Club of Greeley has been quite active during the past semester, for, with the coöperation of such fine singers as Marie Nash, Elizabeth Klein, and Marion Parkinson, it has given several programs.

On January 15 at the Parent-Teacher Club meeting, it sang the following songs: Sweet and Low, by Barby; Swing Low, Sweet Chariot, a Negro spiritual; Carry Me Back to Old Virginny, by Bland; Good-bye, My Lover, Good-bye, a Southern folk song; Who's That A-Calling?, a Southern folk song; I Passed by Your Window, by Brake Lucas. Marie Nash and Elizabeth Klein were the soloists.

Next the Glee Club worked on another group of songs for an assembly on April 21. The soloist was Elizabeth Klein. The songs were: My Curly-Headed Baby, by Chitsam; Deep River, a Negro spiritual arranged by Mrs. Grisard; Mighty Like a Rose, by Navin; Jacob's Ladder, a Negro spiritual; I Ain't Gwine Study War No More, a Negro spiritual.

Some of the entertainers were: Marion Parkinson, Shirely Heibrock, Ruth Goshert, Geneva Hood, Frances Campbell, Loretta Puciaty, and Ruth Boctoroff.

The Glee Club is very grateful to Mrs. Grisard for her efficient directing. All the members hope to continue their efforts in the field of music by joining the Glee Clubs at the main building.

THE SOPHOMORE Girl Reserves was organized during the first semester of the school year, 1931-1932. Because of the present schedule of classes, the second-year girls could not attend meetings with the juniors and the seniors, and so a separate Sophomore Girl Reserve Club was organized. The purpose, "To Find and Give the Best," and the aims are the same as those of the world-wide Girl Reserve organization.

In order to have meetings it was necessary that the girls report one period early. During the first semester the club met in room 108, Tuesdays, second period, and during the second semester it met in the gym annex, Thursdays, third period.

Every girl served on one of the five committees, and each group had a turn at planning a meeting at which its chairman presided. The social committee planned a St. Patrick's Day party; the service group had charge of the Easter baskets for the settlement party at Christopher House on March 26; the music committee had the ceremonial on April 15, the membership group had charge of roll call; and the dramatic committee had a health meeting. The sophomore girls worked with the Senior Club in selling candy at games, dramas, and the Opera.

ONE of the finest girl organizations now in existence is the Girl Reserves. At Lake View there are two of these: the Sophomore and the Senior Girl Reserves. Both have done many fine things for charity by giving settlement parties at Christmas time and selling candy at school functions to raise money for the Scholarship Fund.

Meetings are held weekly; the ceremony of taking in new members in April is the most impressive meeting of the semester, and it makes such a deep impression on the girls that no one would willingly miss it.

Many social activities take up their spare afternoons. Every holiday they have an appropriate party with refreshments. This semester a Mothers and Daughters' Tea was given and soon there will be another tea for the graduating seniors.

The Girl Reserves is prominent not only in this school, but in the entire city. All the North Side clubs are bound together by a central organization, the Inter-Club. Lake View has the honor of having as the president of this organization one of her pupils, Aletha Tegerdine.

To Miss Hartman the girls feel deeply grateful for her splendid coöperation. She has done much towards bettering and making the Girl Reserves a flourishing, enjoyable organization.

AT RAVENSWOOD the girls have had a very successful year. Last semester there was a skating party at the Y. W. C. A., where the girls skated and later had refreshments. There was also a Halloween party at Chase Park Field-house. The dramatics group gave a play, and the music group sang Halloween songs. The service group served doughnuts and apple cider. During the remainder of the party the girls danced. The service group distributed baskets to unfortunate families at Christmas.

This semester there was a St. Patrick's Day party at which Grace Kaiser led the songs. The sports group planned games, and the service group made sham-rocks on which Irish names were printed. The girls danced at the end of this party also. The dramatics group led by Sue Fitzgerald presented a play. The sports group, headed by Elizabeth Swanson, managed a swimming party. Helen Schmidt's social group was in charge of many parties. The service group made clothes for several orphanages, under the direction of Frances Redenour.

Under the leadership of Miss Eiberg the group had many good times. When the girls come over to the main building they will identify themselves with the organization there because of the many delightful experiences they have shared.

4A DIVISION

406-B

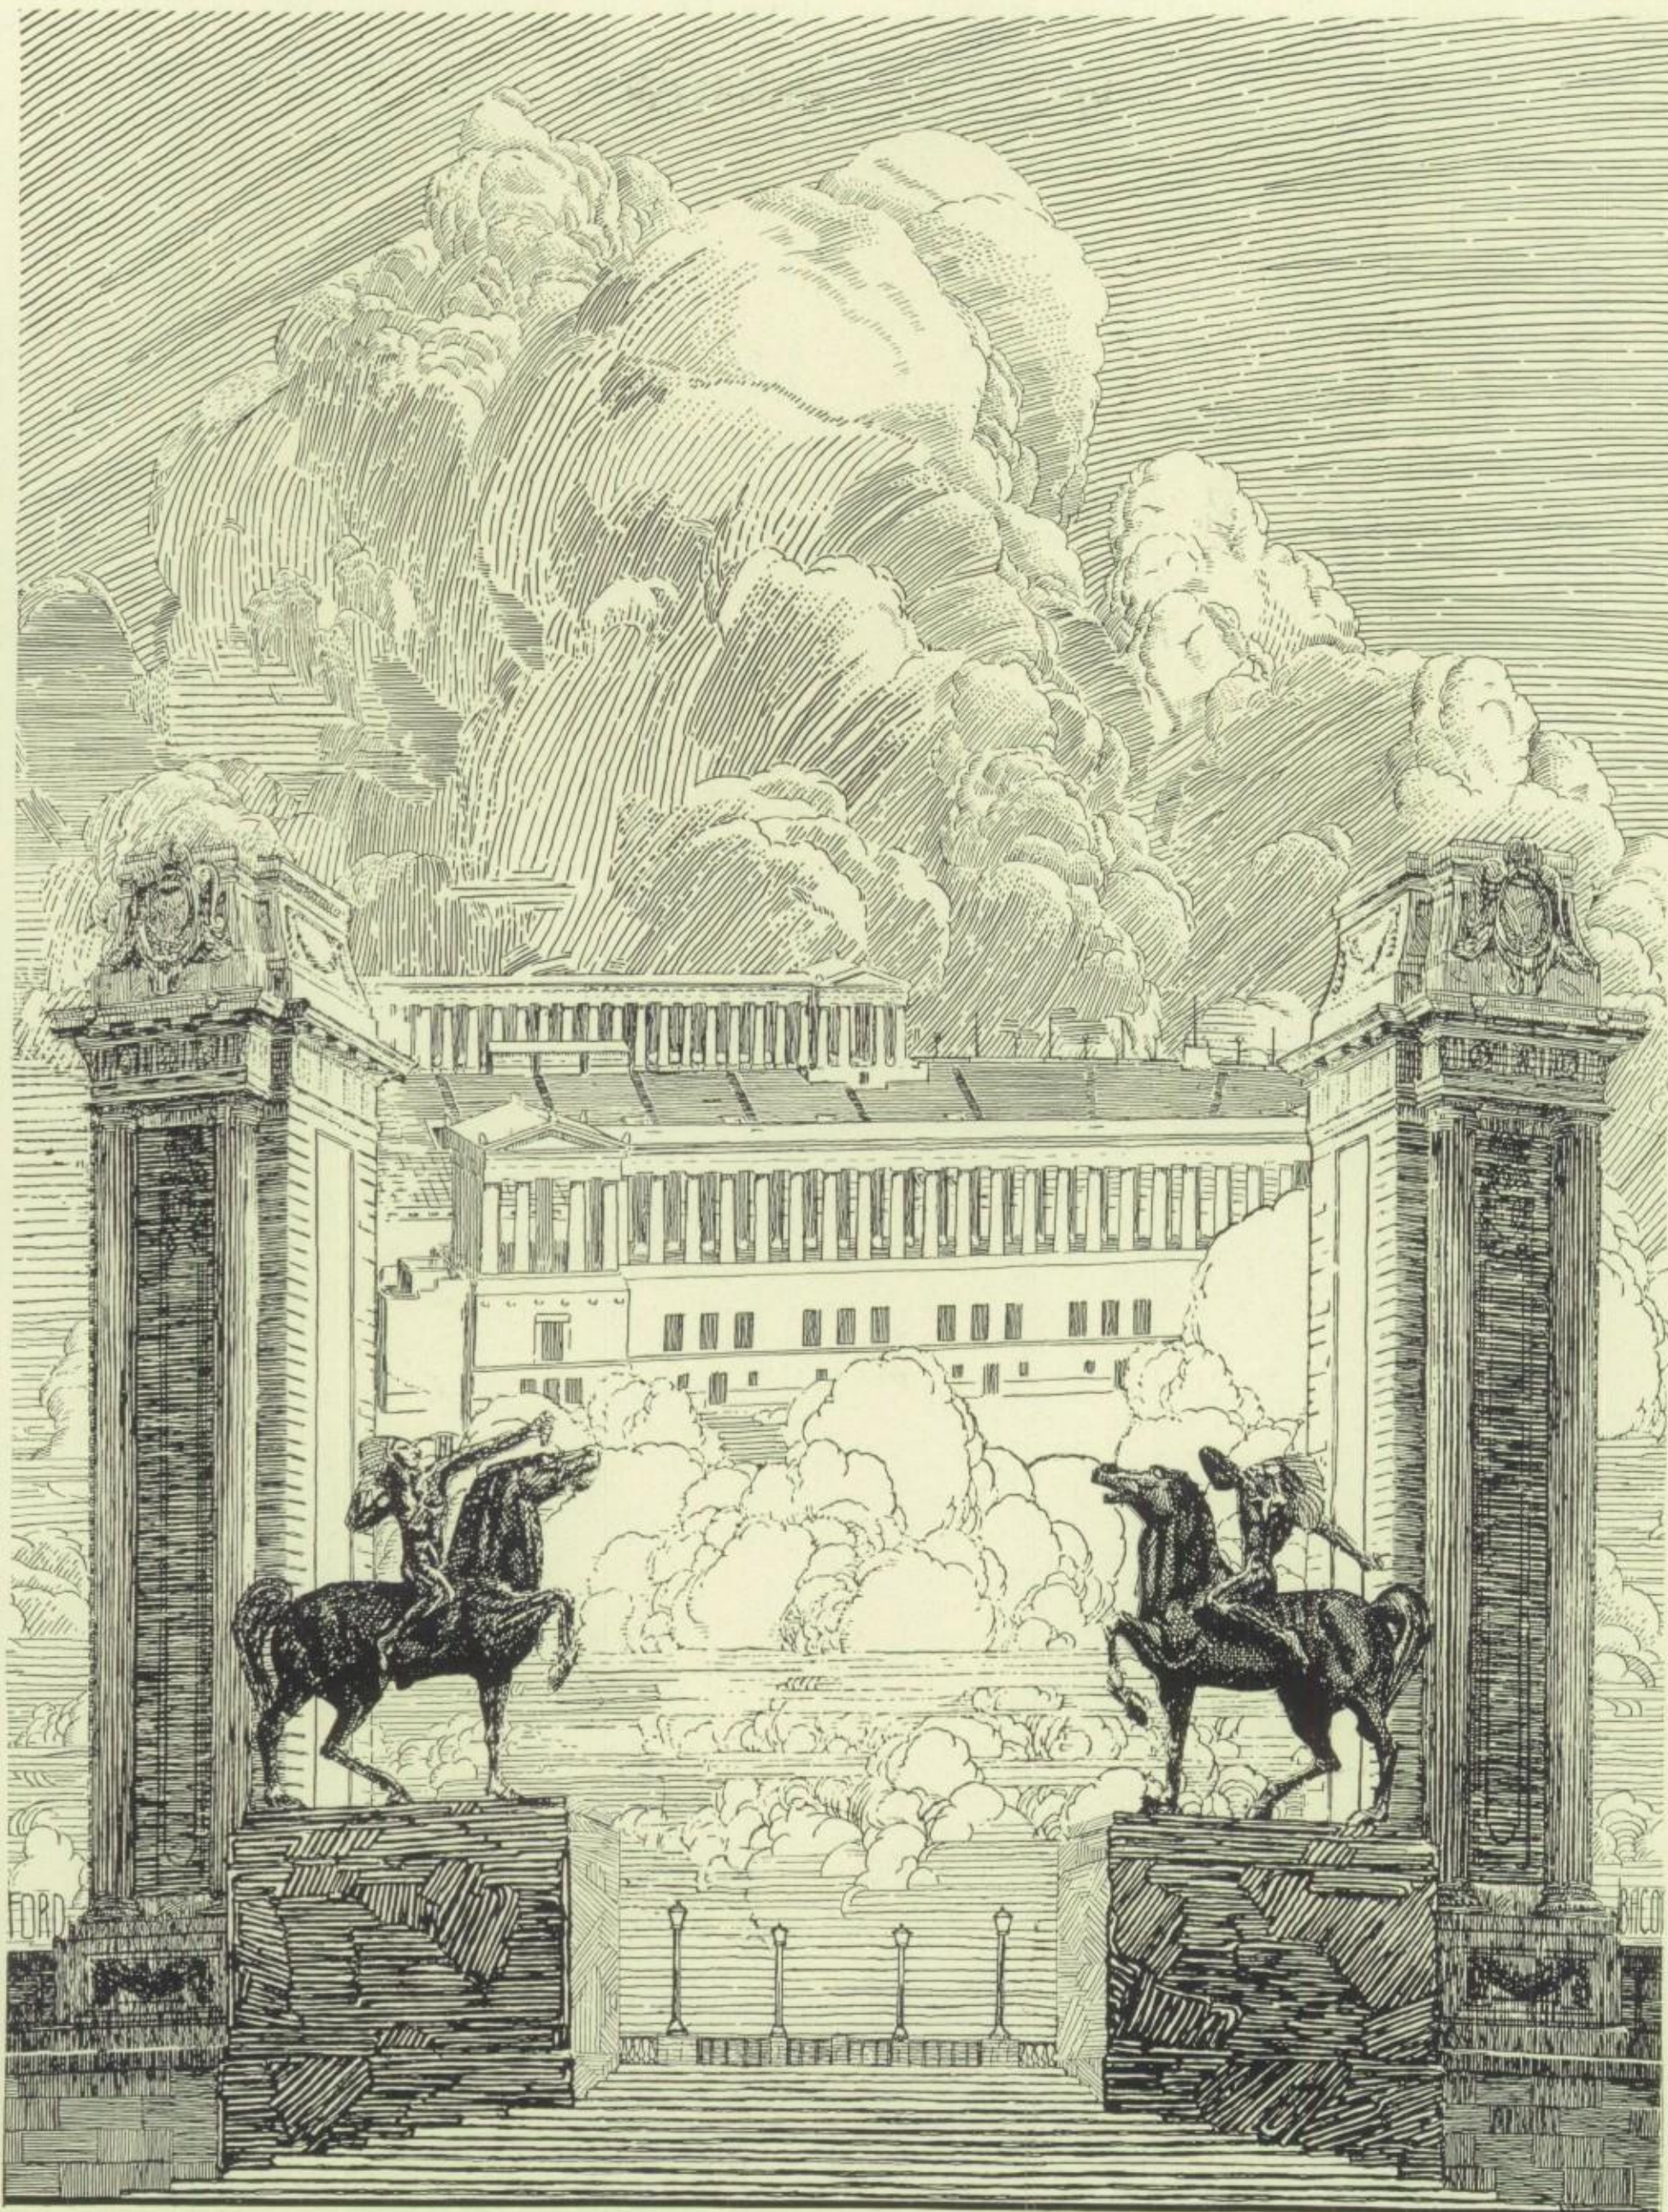

The old method of pronouncing the syllables aloud is being discouraged by the standing monitor, who, it is said, can be heard dropping pins any division period in room 406. Any child responsible for the noise of a pin not being heard over the whole room must sit the remainder of the period with the pin sticking from the end of his nose.

4A DIVISION

Here are many of the school's elite. They don't always study as hard as this, because they're trying to fool you. At times in that division you could drop tons of paper weights and they wouldn't be heard. But they are all good friends—not the weights—after inhabiting that domicile for a year.

THE three hundred and fifty members in the G. A. A. have all taken part in either the basketball or the captainball tournaments. Because the organization is so large, and the girls are so interested in its varied activities, the twenty-three delegates occupy a notable position in the life of the school.

At the beginning of the semester a welcome party was given for the benefit of the new members. Later several splash parties were held at the New Lawrence Hotel. A number of hikes and beach parties were given, too.

The big event of the year was a circus which took place May 19th and 20th. This event was one of the activities managed by the G. A. A. delegates.

There were tumblers, dancers, clowns, pyramids, animals, fortune tellers, and countless breath-taking and enjoyable feats.

Proficiency pins were given out for success in passing the tests to make the required points. Sixteen points are required for bronze pins, eighteen for silver, and twenty for gold. These standards are higher than those of other schools, as their requirements for a bronze pin are fourteen; for a silver, sixteen; for a gold, eighteen. To these Greeley athletes twenty-nine bronze pins were awarded, seventy-seven silver, and sixteen gold.

FEBRUARY CLASS PROPHECY

IT'S A GREAT age in which we are living. Why, the trip from Chicago to Boston took me only five minutes in the Whirlwind, recently patented by Georgia Lee, Leona Minster, and Jane Owen. Upon my arrival, I hustled out to the headquarters of the Prunella Psychologists of Psychometry, where I was to relate my trips into distant lands. David Patterson, president of Harvard University, was giving in another hall an illustrated discourse on In and Out the Window: the Shortest Route Through College. In one room I glimpsed John Menk and Betty Messner busily engaged in completing the manuscript for a new book. I couldn't think of bothering them, so tiptoed out to my car and skimmed over the earth to the "City of Brotherly Love."

Since I wanted to see Penn's monument, I looked up Irma Widman, head of Know Your Own City, Inc. She arranged a special excursion for my benefit. You can imagine my delight when Edith Lampolsky and Georgia Papagiane, the noted historians, arrived to take me in hand for the rest of my visit. While we were walking to the monument, we happened upon a street meeting, under the control of Arthur Krausman, Ed Spink, and Sol Kussy. They were vigorously proclaiming their doctrine of "bigger and better hot dogs" when Frances McCarthy, president of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, appeared on the scene. We escaped the riot that ensued by running up to the top of William Penn's hat. Just as we were beginning to feel a little more at ease, Irwin Marks dashed breathlessly up to us. "Look here," he cried, "you folks can't do this. Think of how your families will feel."

"Do what?" we exclaimed.

"Commit suicide," said Irwin, as he kept an anxious eye upon us. "I'm a guard here to prevent people from jumping off. You wouldn't want me to lose my job, would you?"

Of course we didn't, so we all slid down the railing to earth again. In fact, we picked up such speed that we were carried right into the Lofgren and Laskin Department Store, bitter rivals of John Wanamaker. Adella Kreps, the floor lady, was so startled that she fainted, and Arline Zimmer, chief nurse, had to get a watering can to wake her up.

By the time we left we felt the need of a little moral encouragement, so we directed our steps towards the U. S. Mint. We found Virginia Renberg and Eleanor Rehfeldt chief custodians of our nation's backbone. During our interview, we learned that money was no longer necessary, but that smiles were the latest medium of exchange. Since our finances were rather low, we sought the Mildred and Marion Morgan Banking House.

We lost our way and found ourselves instead at Christ's Church. A solemn, deep voice surprised us, and when we turned we saw Belford Strebel. "Ah, ladies," he said, "it gives me great pleasure to guide you through this historical resting place of so many worthy souls. On your left you see the grave of Betsy Ross, daughter of our glorious flag, and . . .," but we had slipped quietly away to Willow Grove, the amusement park of the world. Robert J. Peterson's band, with Channing Williams as soloist, was scheduled to play all week. As we walked on through the park, we saw Anne Ruskin and Bernice Sandberg trying to hit the bell and precipitate Curtis Wuhs into the watery depths. Lorraine Peckham, Florence Magnuson, and Rita Stroben were giving a splendid demonstration of the latest cake-walk when George Simon, the villain, brought in a mouse. The girls fled, but Charles Swan, the upholder of Her Majesty's Law, led the culprit away by the ear.

On our way to the train, we stopped at Independence Hall, to see some of the things that had belonged to our Presidents. The first of an imposing array of photographs was none other than that of our good friend and ex-President, Andrew Labant. In a separate glass case, we chanced upon the cup which Daniel Wise, the occupant of the White House at that time, had used at the grand old age of five. On the wall hung a copy of the latest Constitution, which provided that men sew on their own buttons and mend their own socks, and it was signed by prominent leaders of the Women's Protective Party, Lola M. Peterson, Vera Lindsay, and Dorothy Stryker.

Suddenly we realized that it was ten minutes past train time. Just then Ray Wherry, as if in answer to a maiden's prayer, offered to take me for a ride in his airplane. I bade my fair escorts good-by and found myself, within two shakes of a lamb's tail, in Annapolis. The front and the rear admirals, Kenneth Nelson and Robert A. Peterson, were charmed to see us, but both side admirals, Carlton Walstad and Ralph Poulsen, were busy washing dishes because they had tried to find out if Chief Admiral Louis Stauber's pet fish could swim out of water.

I went to Washington that afternoon, and arrived in time to sit in on a meeting of Congress. The burning question, "Shall round or square heads symbolize the United States?" was under fire. Mildred Sperry, Conception Romero de la Garza, and Virginia Leonard thought the round ones more artistic, but Marjorie Lorin, Clara Pellicci, and Helen Pfeiffer vigorously supported the blockheads. Ellenora Wagner, sergeant at arms, declared the decision in favor of the blockheads.

After dinner at Edward Somionka's hotel, I paid President Wise a visit. All the time that I was with him, however, mysterious shadows seemed to flit from the chair to the desk. Occasionally the light glinted upon the barrel of what seemed to be a pistol protruding from behind the curtain. Finally, I asked the President whether I was slightly insane or something was in the room. Laughingly he replied, "Oh, those are my bodyguards. Come here, fellows," he called, and Paul Vachette and Edwin Voss stood up, looking quite sheepish and uncomfortable.

Saying that I had to see a lady about her knitting, I hurried away to the zoo, where who would appear to my wondering eyes but Marjorie Young, sketching animal pictures for Lucille Mattson's book, Animals, Old and New. Carolyn Stolzoff was painting, too, but for a different reason. She was drawing the plumage of rare birds in order that her employers, the Ruth Tannhauser-Dorothy Lurker Manufacturing Company, might make a humble chicken's feather appear to be that of a bird of paradise.

While walking along, I heard some one knocking on a window. Turning, I saw in the Palais Royale, owned by Robert Press, several young ladies demonstrating the latest gymnasium equipment. They were, as perhaps you have already guessed, Lillian Rommel, Barbara Schmidt, Nan Shaw, and Doris Slade. I could stay but a few minutes, however, as I wanted to go to White Sulphur Springs in a Geomarine car, recently invented by Lewis Levin and Marshall Silverman.

After traveling on land and water, John Peterson, the pilot, soon set me down at the Springs. It was really a delightful summer resort with accommodations and activities to please the most particular. Henrietta Wilfinger, Vera Stair, and Eva Lay were strolling along a shady lane with much-interested escorts. Marian Teske was making up poetry to recite to Professor Bernard Rothfeld, who was on sabbatical leave from Northwestern. Doris Krockenberg, Erna Wahl, Ruth Schults, and Lena Scolli, famous Olympic swimmers, were racing in the pool. In the meantime, I noticed a number of people watching a tennis match. Upon drawing closer, I saw that the players were Harry Miller, Erna Lippe, Gilbert Williams, and Elsie Wehner. These four held, between them, the world's trophies for tennis. I was engrossed in watching the game when a golf ball whizzed past my head. Startled half out of my wits, I glowered in the direction from which it had come, but when Bernard Royne and Robert Plugfelder ran up with such looks of consternation, I could not help laughing.

A boat was leaving shortly for a trip down the St. John River; several of my friends and I boarded her to see what the mouth of a river looked like. Dorothy Zeigler, Sylvia Kuebler, and Catherine Peters, however, could not resist the charm of the Isle of Palms, so we kissed them good-bye and glided on our way.

We found the aperture of the good St. John quite healthy, as the tonsils had been removed and the teeth were in good condition. As we went farther inland, however, his throat became quite cluttered up with crocodiles and his esophagus shaded by many overhanging trees. Robert Nemec and Astrid Larsen were so entranced in studying the trees that they fell out of the boat, but an obliging crocodile returned them on his back.

Suddenly we heard some one cry, "The boat's leaking! The boat's leaking!" Rushing below deck, we found that Marion Piehler and Raymond La Vey, noted zoölogists, had sawed a hole in the bottom and were fitting in a glass window in order that they might observe the marine animals. After they had been thoroughly admonished and put to bed without supper, peace again reigned supreme.

News had been sweeping the country of a new cult that had arisen in central Florida. It was composed of a group of young men who believed that the ancient Romans were the only people after whom one should model. But Esther Weiner, Florence Spiegel, and Evelyn Schultz were rather doubtful of an ancient-modern Roman. Accordingly, they felt the urge for a rest in Winterhaven, where they could compose warm music in tropical surroundings.

I was trudging along a rather discouraging trail when the sound of voices attracted my attention. Then I saw Edith Schnepf, Ruth Schutman, and Gertrude Seifert, long lost exploresses, arguing with George Varcoe and Paul Willey, prominent Indian chiefs. The young ladies, evidently having decided that they had been captives long enough, desired to return to their native land. Of course, the ladies won and were soon hiking merrily back to Chicago.

Finally, I caught sight of the newly risen colony. As the modern Romans were prejudiced against visitors, I disguised myself as a chameleon and watched from an adjacent soap box. There was so much activity that I judged they had proclaimed a holiday in honor of something. Three chief senators, Stephen Spencer, Robert Maass, and William Rockwood, dressed in long flowing togas, were announcing the program of the day. Suddenly, four chariots, driven by Sylvio Mannino, James Marohn, Raymond Marsell, and Charles Schiff, dashed down the race course to a tie. Then Gilbert Moran and Max Ortner displayed their wonderful horsemanship by exchanging horses while they (the horses) stood on their heads, lay on the ground, and played leap frog.

Next on the program were Howard Murphy, William Swain, Robert Martin, and William Wallin, gladiators of the hour (there had to be new ones every hour). A terrific battle was waged. I thought Robert Martin had been mortally wounded, but he didn't lie down. Then the realization dawned upon me that they were using rubber swords!

After that was a bull fight with Earl Phillips the center of attraction. He had only to shake his head to make bedlam break loose. I became so excited that I stood up and unintentionally became bright red in color. The bull reverted his attentions so quickly to me that poor Earl was left completely in the lurch. I'm afraid that I didn't appreciate the loving animal's affection, however, for when he reached my soap box, I had become a wee sparrow and had flown away home.

EDITOR'S NOTE

This prophecy's not like the ones
We've had for other years;
The girl who wrote these fatal words
Is mystic queen of seers.

We found her with a velvet cloth
And shiny crystal ball!
Beware, beware her mystic words
As here she lets them fall!

JUNE CLASS PROPHECY

"ATTENTION, PLEASE!" shouted James Ferguson, distinguished editor of the Chicago Twilight Bolshevik, the paper owned by the millionaire dog fancier, Ruth Deimel. The recipients of the editor's wrath were the column conductors: Jean Beecher, "Advice to the Lovelorn"; Ed Moss, "Athletics"; Agnes Beierwaltes, "Beauty Hints"; Marian Eck and Losey Bergquist, "Cookery Hints"; Harold Miller, "What the Well-dressed Man Will Wear"; Charles Merchant, "Bright Sayings of Children"; Peter Groo and Bob Lyons, "Ping Pong Points"; Louise Helfand, "The Care and Feeding of Infants"; Clara Corthier, "Best Sellers of Today." Just when everything was beginning to run smoothly again, the door crashed open and Regina Kunst, the famous designer, burst wild-eyed into the office. "Sue de Rocher and Osver Carmi got my last creation all wrong. Some fashion editors you have!" she whooped. It took the combined efforts of the Art Department, consisting of James Bishop, Sylvan Blonsky, and Ford Bacon, to calm her partially. They finally managed to appease her wrath by taking her to luncheon and dance at the Cafe de Minogue, where Bob Flexman and his Rumba Rascals were the current musical hit and where Genevieve Curran furnished the necessary classical music with her now famous violin.

The party was in the midst of their shrimp cocktails when above the din of the jazz there came a hearty greeting. They looked up, and there, passing the table, was Gale Emerich, inimitable war correspondent, just returned from the Senegalese wars and looking fit and as brown as a berry. The newspaper crew immediately grasped him by the coat-tails and drew him over to their table, whereupon he insisted that his secretary, Arthur Gordon, and a number of camera-men, Bob Beebe, Edwin Carlson, Fred Keller, Arthur Kasdorf, and Bob Melbye be asked to join the party also. Just then Clara Kramer, the noted columnist, came over, and before long the whole party was gasping at her gossipy news.

"Did you hear that Fred Ganja has made the Dazzling Duds, the big league team owned by Bob Lavell? That John Giese, eminent financier, has gone in for breeding horses? His latest colt promises to win the Preakness. He named it Yutch in honor of Byron Graeff, physical culture expert, who has a gym in partnership with Richard Fisher."

We were amazed at the startling news that Carl Hedblom, famous surgeon, had performed a very dangerous operation on Norman Ehrlich, who was progressing nicely.

"Don't you think that Russ Marks has a wonderful voice?" asked Ethel Andersen, star reporter of the Gazette, owned by the socialist, Thomas Bolger. When the affirmatives had died down somewhat, Frank Cotterman, psychiatrist, noticed that Jeanne Clyman was becoming restless, so he proposed that the entire group go and hear Robert Corbett sing in Othello. Nick Gavares, owner of the theatre where Corbett was singing, gave them free passes, and they all went off in highly gleeful mood. They arrived at the theatre, where they met Florence Benson, Winifred Boyer, Virginia Dall, and the music critics, Donald Gleason and Ruth Koropp. The combined parties took possession of three boxes and quieted down as the concert was about to begin. The first number was Altschul's Rhapsody Number Three, played by Evaline Cliffe. She was a trifle nervous, for she could see Oscar Granberg, Tribune reporter, taking notes on the concert as it went along. After Evaline's number there was a short respite from music while Lucille Dahlberg and Margaret Brown did an interpretative dance which they had learned at the dancing school of Helen Ball and Lucille Hyman. Charles Guettell, stage manager, came out to announce that because of a fit of temperament on the part of Al Georges, the celebrated tenor, the show would have to be postponed. At the mention of the word temperament, Katherine Lederer, the renowned artist, began to rave, so that the party on their way out, had to turn her over to the matron of the theatre, Mabel Freedberg, and her assistant, Charlotte Heinrich. On their way to the musical comedy hit, Mary Danci and Her Dancing Dolls, the party picked up that famous comedienne Velma Brown and her friends, Arlene Freese and Ann Kosterec, who were on their way to the same show to get some ideas for a new act that they were going to put on in the Burhop Palace, the newest theatre in town. "Ruth Meyer panned our last act so hard that we have to change it or go on the rocks," they explained.

The party decided to walk down Anzures Drive, the boulevard named after that great statesman, Rudolph Anzures. Suddenly Melvin Dankelman pointed to a huge plate glass window with "Korb and Koenig" lettered on it in huge gold letters. All at once the party was galvanized into action, for from the place there issued one ungodly scream after another. Walter Brandenburg dashed bravely in, and came right out again, escorting badly frightened Dorothy Maurer, the copywriter for the establishment. Harold Alwart followed them, profusely apologizing for his dog, which had started all the commotion. Dorothy graciously forgave him, and the two of them joined the party which had by now assumed gigantic proportions. They decided to split up, and one half of them went to see Jack Gilbert and Martha Cliff in the mystery thriller, The Bogey Man, written by Alex Beck, while the rest of them went to the tearoom of Helen Bergquist and Bereniece Born. Mary Baillie, Evelyn Barutzke and Phyllis Cady, Olympic champions, were there; each one was eating one of those famous salads that Eleanor Anderson alone knew how to make.

They were chattering comfortably about old times when a huge plum-colored limousine drew up before the tearoom, and Robert Byington and Marvin Heller got out, gave some instructions to the chauffeur, George Gauss, and went up the stairs into the tearoom. The crowd hailed them enthusiastically, and Tom Harris, practical joker, immediately tried to play a joke on Mr. Heller. After a time he succeeded, for while Marvin was listening with interest to Helen Kannette, a rich broker, Tom managed to put some salt into the sugar bowl. When Marvin put sugar into his coffee and tasted the resulting mess, he immediately turned to Tom and handed him a card on which was printed, "Andrew Johnson, Attorney-at-law." "See my lawyer," he said, as he nonchalantly pushed Tom in the face and left the place.

Just then the phone rang. It was George Kolstedt calling to invite the entire gang to his studio for a party; there were a number of celebrities at the place that he wanted his friends to meet. The bunch left in a flurry of coats and scarfs and hats. They hailed a fleet of Goodman cabs. When the vehicles pulled up in front of the building, Mildred Doran noticed that the cornerstone bore the caption, "Daley and MacArthur, Architects." John Beutler led the way to the door and Ruth Claeson, looking very dignified in her afternoon gown of Marberg silk, graciously showed them the way to the elevator, which was run by Kathleen Gibson, who looked very trim in her olive green uniform. She confided to the crowd that she was running the elevator in place of George Litman, who was ill, at the same time saving his position and gathering material for a book that she was going to write some day.

Finally Morton Goldberg pointed out the studio door. The gang had been guided through the corridor by sounds of laughter and singing, but as they approached the door, the noise stopped abruptly. Somewhat uncomfortably they looked at one another. Finally Mabel Barrett summoned up enough courage to press the buzzer. The door was immediately flung open by a beautifully dressed woman, Aveneil Green, the society matron. The crowd in the studio was a varied and a colorful one. Evidently someone had been telling a story, for they were grouped around a couch. "That accounts for the sudden silence," breathed John Howe. "I was afraid that the crowd up here was framing something on us. They are all that artistic kind. Apt to do anything that comes into their minds at the moment. Might have tried to douse us with water even, if they didn't like our entrance or the color of our clothes."

George was surprised to see the crowd so soon, but the cabs had made good time going down the drive, as Police Commissioners Dan and Bower had ordered the roads cleared. They had thought it was the mayoral parade, and everyone was aware of the influence of his Honor, Richard Fink. The new arrivals were welcomed warmly, and then the host requested them to leave their wraps in the reception hall. They were then shown around the apartment, which had been decorated by Caroline Korr and Margaret Hayward, noted interior decorators. Dorothy Einert was there, too, and was wandering around the place straightening the drapes, arranging the table covers, and fussing with the various vases, pictures, and curios that were so abundant. Vivian Lundegard was attracted by a beautiful rug of some unknown luxurious fur. In reply to her question regarding it, Robert Kaufman swelled out his chest and replied that he had shot a rare animal of some unpronounceable name and knowing that Robert Lademan wouldn't believe him, had brought back the pelt with him for proof. This remark brought forth a burst of laughter that put them all at their ease, and called forth a remark about dyed cat from that prize wise-cracker, Esther Johnson. Then Josephine McKinley made the suggestion that they should form into groups in order to make all-around introductions easier. The artists formed one group, dancers another, musicians another, and so forth. The suggestion was met with shouts of acclaim, and for the next half hour they were taken up with segregating themselves into the proper groups. Finally everyone had found his place, and the introductions began.

In the group of theatrical people there were Helen Granroth, Belle Gaffin, Evelyn Girson, and Vivian Geetersloh, the Four Flying "G's" of circus fame and their manager, Jerry Berlinger; Henry Hill and Leo Miecowski, who were then at the Orpheum with their side-splitting dialogues; Virginia Kitz, currently at the Felbinger Theatre with her clever imitations; the dance team of Curto and Flint, who were making such a hit with their specialty waltzes; Virginia Horace, Pauline Doering, Mariel Duffy, Annmarie Gentz, and Helen Jacobs of the Scandals Chorus; Bill Goldman and Loris Crisp, who were freelancing with their tap dancing at the time; and Adele Ausmus and her troupe, consisting of Rosemary George, Bernadette Flood, Anita Baumel, Harriet Bronaugh, and Mary Louise Contzen. In the artistic group there were Edith Dillon, Janet Ewen and Robert Grafe of the Greenwald Interior Decorating Company; Elsie Adams, Ruth Martin, and Minnie Butler of the Gochis and Gower Advertising Agency; Marjorie Blanche and Bill Engelter, free lancers; and Dorothy Charleston, who had made a name for herself by virtue of her artistic way of hairdressing.

There was a small group of professional people: Alfred Falk, attorney; Judge William Hultquist; Dr. Jeanette Feuer and Dr. Melvin S. Koral; Lawyer Marie Eisenbach; Geraldine Larson and Glen Leach, importers; Miriam Allen, a Latin teacher, and Edwin Johnson, financier. There also was Margaret Kokonas, the only woman banker in the United States.

In the group of authors there were Roberta Hinegardner, Eleanor Knapik, Frances Keppeler, Louise Horan, Lois Lake, and Minnie Linne.

Then with especial pride Regina introduced the black sheep bunch. This crowd consisted of the people who had made a comfortable sum of money and were now doing what they wanted at the time they wanted to do that particular thing. There was Grace Kunze, who was at that time designing doll clothes—and making a success of it too. Steven Koran, who was experimenting with rubber dumb-bells for outfitting a new gymnasium—a noiseless one; Marie Hildebrand, who was working on a new type of ballet slipper; Violet Greenstone and Geraldine Menzel, who had opened a beauty parlor, and Virginia Hester and Eleanor Hansen, who were struggling with a curio shop for the fun of the thing. None of them had to worry about finances.

Introductions over, they became friends, and before long the clock struck midnight. The entire party was invited to stay for a luncheon. They accepted gratefully, for no one had had anything to eat since early in the afternoon. The meal was eaten amid laughter and joking, and then the entire crowd left the place together, singing and chatting down the hall.

Suddenly one of the doors of the other studios in the building flew open, and the curly brown head of Celia Langer was thrust through the opening. "What's the idea of all the racket?" she called out, "I'm trying to get into trim for my concert tomorrow." Then when she recognized some of her former school-fellows, she called a cheery greeting and invited them in. The entire crowd entered, and had another party. Dick Kruse, Arnold Lorch, and Jack Lynch, the famous swimmers, sprawled out before the fireplace, entertaining Florence Littell, Bernadine Kleinhans, and Mildred Lenander with stories of past competitions. Robert Kinn and Dr. Frank Marks immediately began solemnly to discuss bacteriology with Irving Miller. Aaron Lowenstein and Anita Hoppman, Richard Knecht and William Kramer went into huddles to discuss advertising methods of the day. Julian Jacobson dozed in a chair by the piano while Ray Marsell, Mathilda Helfer, Mae Miller and Margaret Malloy sang to the accompaniment of William Lundquist. Helen Liebovitz, Bernard Alderblum, and George Lieberman were discussing business in a corner. Lois La Pierre and Anita Krauspe were talking about the dresses from the Kovash and Hietala Dress Shop. Mildred McGuffie told the others that she had news for them.

Every one had a respect for Miss McGuffie's business ability. The news was that Margaret Michael had opened a new chain of broadcasting stations. Kenneth Miller was to be the head announcer. He had been in the radio game for a long time and would attend to the technical part which she did not understand. John and Mildred Meyer went on practising wise cracks which they used in their brother and sister act, which was playing at the biggest show in town, D. Lausche and E. Helfand Paradise.

Inasmuch as the party was not very lively and the hour was quite late, the party broke up. This time they went yawning down the hall. Once on the street, they scattered, separating into couples and fours, and getting into cabs. A milk wagon piloted by George Brown rattled by just as the last couple clambered into their car and drove off.

But a peaceful bed was to be a thing of the future for quite some time. A car, packed to the guards, whizzed past around a corner and practically ruined the poor milk man. When the smoke cleared, one might have seen Julia Anselmini, Margaret Anderson, Haven Andereck, Lois Landon, Lillian Mrazek, Kathryn Enright, Dorothea Frank, Betty Fine, and Eleanore Elbersen removing such parts of themselves from the shambles as they were able. Fortunately, black eyes and sore places were their only mementos of the collision, but George was a total loss, having a broken arm or two, and several cuts, results of the destruction of the milk bottles.

While they waited for an ambulance, Lillian explained to the ones that had just come up that they had been attending a reunion and were all going out to Betty's country home for the week-end. At this point two arms of the law, John Donehy and Walter Doyle, came up and requested explanations, which were given by four people at the same time. John finally went to call his sergeant—Nick Gavares, no less!—and before he returned, the ambulance, with much clanging of bells and howling of a siren, drew up. Out piled Warren Fitt and Jerome Edenson, dressed in spotless white, and removed the casualty.

Suddenly there was a noise overhead. People gathered in little crowds and squinted into the hot sun. High above, a tiny speck was approaching from the west. In a city, one does not strain his neck for every passing aeroplane, and yet the noises of the crowd grew louder, excitement spread, until arms became more frantic in their wavings, and the shouts of the people rose above the noises of the city. With surprising rapidity, the speck grew larger. Horrors!!! It was a grisly thing! Terrorizing as it shot over the city, it scraped the Tribune Tower. Charles Merchant's mechanical fly had broken its chains! In two hours, it would lose a nut or a bolt, and a life's work would crash to earth in a crumbled ruin.

FEBRUARY CLASS CALENDAR

September 8—Tennis rackets, golf clubs, and novels are tossed into the closet and sprayed with "Moth-X." Here the beloved implements remain until next summer.

September 23—A real political atmosphere; four thousand students wave Latin books and shout themselves hoarse for their favorite Commission candidates.

October 7—Certain important people of the Lake re View staff lose their grown-up airs as tradition gives them a severe spanking. After eleven licks and one to grow on, everything is fixed up by the presentation of a great big birthday cake with eleven pink candles.

October 10—The world is horrified today when a number of Wild Cats engage in a terrific battle with the Lane High School football team. The fighting stops when someone fires a pistol into the air.

October 19—A horde of course books creep out of their dark winter holes and fly through the building, frightening several little boys and girls.

October 21—More noses turn to the sky. One foolish youth breaks his neck when, after receiving a new gold honor pin, he tosses back his head a bit too vigorously.

October 31—Several strange happenings of the night are believed to be a direct result of Lake View's victory over Senn during the day. "Such peculiar things as witches, pumpkins, and false faces were not uncommon," says the Lake re View.

November 4—The vocational conference reminds one of the buttons on his coat: rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief.

November 11—Their faces are frozen to the east. The city pauses a moment; all is silent. The inner eye sees men crawling under tangled wire, and the inner ear hears shells and trucks, shouts and screams, echoing dully in the smoke-laden air.

November 13—The hand that once spanked us, tonight pats us on the back, for beneath the moon the school doors open to inspecting parents.

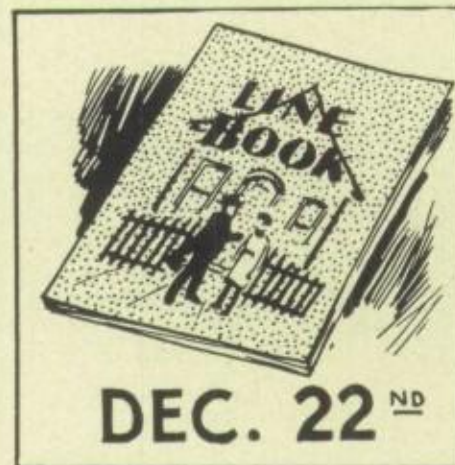

November 19-20—Lake View's Alumni get down to the bottom of things. Feet of Clay will be, perhaps, their ultimate end. At present, however, they are content with Loose Ankles.

November 25 to 30—Dissipation gets a knockout; turkey, cranberries, mince meat pie, and a big easy chair.

December 11-12—The annual Band and Orchestra Contest is most stimulating. We hear "The glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome."

December 22—Excellent "lines" of jokes, gags, and verses, collected and prepared by the Lake re View, come out in a handy pocket sized volume.

December 24 to January 3—Santa Claus brings little red wagons and stick candy to freshies, marbles to juniors, and yo-yos to seniors.

December 28—See page 22 in the Whatnot Issue of the Red and White.

January 14 and 15—A rejected suitor polishes his spurs, sharpens his sword, and plants a good old Civil War smack on a head full of powdered hair, while Barbara Frietchie claps her hands in glee.

January 23—After practicing a new-fangled waltz before the radio all afternoon, dressing like a fireman, running all the way to Mary's house, then climbing the steps at the Edgewater, Billie finds no trouble in dancing till twelve o'clock, going to the Via Lago and dancing till three o'clock, and then dancing in his sleep.

January 26—At last the hungry seniors get fed and will be—

January 28—Fat for graduation.

JUNE CLASS CALENDAR

February 1—"Cantcha take just one more, pulease, Teacher? I gotta get out after sixth. Oh, heck!" (Conversation of 4000 students Registration Day.)

February 11—Lake View Basketeers defeat Lane, 28-27. We refuse to brag, but—

February 12—Lincoln's birthday. Three cheers for Honest Abe and a glorious holiday.

February 12 to 26—Parent Teachers' Club drive.

February 14—Saint Valentine's Day. Pet crushes exchange cards.

February 22—Washington's birthday—Another three-day week-end.—What a break!

February 22—Branches enact playlet for milk fund benefit at Aragon Ballroom. They did right by Little Nell (the Main), and we were proud of them.

February 29—Leap Year Day—Wary boys try to sneak out of the building, but the vigilant girls get their man.

March 1—It's a sad story, but Lake View is beaten by Marshall, 19-18.

March 1—Girl Reserves enjoy gay afternoon at Mad-March Whoop, a charming dance.

March 2—Trembling candidates for Commission give novel speeches before their stern judges, the students.

March 3—Mendelssohn Club present benefit performance at Lake View. Some real talent here.

March 9—Honor Society Assembly. Students stroll off the stage, their eyes gleaming with reflections of shiny new pins.

March 10—Saxophone and Cinema issue of Red and White out today. And if we do say it ourselves—wery, wery good.

March 11—Faculty plays Varsity at basketball. I guess we showed 'em. They're not so good. We beat them, 18-8.

March 15—Red and White stages play to launch campaign for annual.

March 16—Honor Society Gold and Silver Pin students receive their "helpful addresses" and get ice cream as a reward.

March 17—Once again green and orange flowers remind us of the Irish patron saint.

March 18—G.A.A. holds Welcome Party. Everybody happy. How can we help it? And what refreshments!

April 1—Even lofty seniors get taken down a peg or two today. Much excitement in 406 and 300.

April 11—Miss Steiner of Grinnell, Iowa, speaks to us today. We really enjoy hearing her.

April 13—We're quaking in our boots this fair day—Class Rating. This is the one time during the year that we envy the "Honor" students.

April 14, 15, 16—The Student Prince, the outstanding success of the year. Marie Nash as Kathie is lovable.

April 20—Vocational Conferences.

April 23 to May 1—Spring Vacation. Blissfully unconscious, students wander 'round, attacked by Dan Cupid and the weather.

June 2 and 3—Senior Drama. Embryonic actors and actresses dream of a life career on the boards.

June 11—The Prom! Dancing, romancing, promenading bring ecstatic joy to the hearts of youths and maids.

June—The big drive is on—"Will you sign my Annual?"

June 14—Class Day. Seniors break bread together for the first and last time.

June 16—Commencement. Seniors stand not upon the order of their going, but go with sighs of regret for school days—golden rule days.

JUNIOR CLASS

SING, O Muses, of the Junior class
Who through the Senior portals soon will pass.

Bring to us the reason for their fame,
Recount for us the glories of their name.

Juniors in this school are many sorts,
They rank high in scholarship and sports.

Cullerton and Crane, our football men,
Helped our team to win the game with Senn.

Epstein, Davis, Grilli, and Sillavo
Make the football rooters bellow "bravo".

Football, too, claims Anderson and Johnson,
Dietiker, and Engelke, and Rathsam.

Sidney is another of our workers;
On our team there is no place for shirkers.

That is why our football team displayed
Sportsmanship in every game they played.

When the winds of autumn come again,
We shall cheer for all our football men.

Richard Brady "made" the soccer team,
Where he and other Juniors show their steam.

These are Harold Johnson and Loyd Wortman,
Also Richard Wessling; all are sportsmen.

Basketball, as played here at Lake View,
Brings to us a joy that's always new.

Holleb, Curl, Tatara, Koehler, all
"Made" the lightweight team in basketball.

Guntner is another of the lights
Who gets out for the school and really fights.

Armstrong, Troutwine, Kistenmacher, Guehring,
Our colors these four heavyweights are wearing.

Durkin, Stanley, Fenner, Schoen, and Sim
In the Leaders' Class display their vim.

Jennings, Reemsen, Thomas, leaders, too,
To this class of athletes have been true.

Track claims many of the Juniors, too,
Hoffman, West, and Kuehl are just a few.

Rathsam, Stamer, Swanson, Grand, and Watts,
Lindeman, and Tirschel are high spots.

Krummel, Wessling, Mercati, and Wortman,
Bacci, Waters, Sydney, and "Bob" Westman.

Epstein, Grilli, Anderson, and Buehling,
Davis, Sydney, Johnson, all are working.

Engelke, Dietiker, and Rathsam,
Sillavo, too, will help us win, then.

On the track they, too, display their vim,
Showing that they're interested in gym.

Baseball takes our fancy in the spring,
Then Bueneman and Guntner have their fling.

Kistenmacher, Troutwine, Fuchs, and Nitz
Bring the baseball team a lot of hits.

Krenos, Nelson, Tatara, and Hoffman,
Fitt, and Wargus are more of our batsmen.

Schoeder, Snyder, Wittman, Tway, and Olson,
Buckley, Crenshaw, Levy, Floyd, and Hoffman,

These boys are the fishes of the school,
And try to snatch new laurels in the pool.

Our golf team claims Webb and "Rus" McNally,
Who shoot "Birdies" and "Eagles" down the fairway.

Malick is our class D'Artagnan,
He will fight a duel whene'er he can.

Sergeant Homer Dormer, Company "C",
Is captain of the inner company.

Hicks, the captain of the rifle team,
Shows the other members he has steam.

R. O. T. C. Juniors set a pace
Giving other members quite a race.

Cadet Lieutenant Sullivan of "B"
Is very active in that company.

Many Junior shooters have their letters,
Some are Blitzsen, Tomaschoff, and Butters.

Cook, Buerstetta, Mueller, Pike, and Ring
Make the rifle ranges quite a thing.

Malick, Stern, and Tutein for their aims
On the rifle team you'll find their names.

Betty Norton of the Leaders' Class,
Is an active, pretty, brown-eyed lass.

Helen Hanisch, athletic too,
Reports news items to the Lake re View.

Athletic work more fun affords
With Anderson and Noble on the boards.

Many Juniors, too, have honor pins.
The prize that an ambitious student wins.

In the silver group are seventy-four,
Could any other class desire more?

Eckstrom, Winkler, Klauber, Gross, and Keller,
Buckholz, Heyman, Jacobs, Torn, and Heller.

Jacob, Bandanza, Lampinen, and Gabel,
Miller, Borman, Hudon, Ross, and Merriell,

Coune, Kamp, Patricia, Ernst and Noble,
Schneider, Jagdman, Butters, Cook, and Goebel.

Ketter, Wander, Tomaschoff, and Spark,
All know that high grades require work.

Johns, Van Duzer, Boyer, Smith, L. Miller,
Peterson, Schag, Dietiker, and Meier,

Ehmann, Kleppish, Norton, Green, and Wehner,
Crofford, Whitehouse, McNally, Lund, and Whalen,

Miller, Wilfinger, Benditzky, Kraemer,
Osterman, Frank, Atzell, and Elander,

Roberts, Howard, Hirsch, R. Peterson,
Jacobs, Steinbrecher, and Fullerton.

Vinokuroff, Berry, Arms, and Collings,
Gained by work their present honor standings.

Other things than athletics, too,
Show to us the things to which they're true.

They are busy on the Lake re View,
Each week they bring us what they find is new.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

WE strolled slowly up the stairs of the red brick building to which we had been directed and examined the bronze plate beside the door. "Lake View Hall of Fame," it read. Good! This was the place. Uncertain where to go, we welcomed the guide, a brisk, business-like young person who asked us what exhibition we wished to see.

"The Sophomore Group," we answered.

Assuming an air of great superiority, he conducted us through a winding labyrinth of halls to a rather large room over which was the inscription "Sophomorettes." As we entered the room, the first picture that attracted our attention was one of a group of smiling young ladies, about two hundred in number.

"Who are they?" we inquired.

"They compose the Sophomore Girls' Glee Club, a most enterprising organization. There are some very promising singers among them: Margaret Johnson, Eleanor Colbath, Veda Collier, Anita Foote, and Florence Buchholz. But do not think that the girls are the only ones possessing musical talent. Here is the Boys' Glee Club, which has a membership of eighty-five. It also boasts some splendid voices: Harold Mick, Charles Henderson, and Peter Stathus."

"Why, who is that?" we suddenly exclaimed, gazing at the portrait of a very attractive girl.

"Oh, that's Marie Nash," we were immediately informed. "She played the part of Kathie in The Student Prince."

"Oh, yes," we said, remembering that wonderful production. "Marie certainly has a beautiful voice. She will probably be a grand opera singer some day."

Our guide smiled and agreed, "Yes, that's her one great ambition—to be a prima donna. She loves music and takes not only vocal but violin and piano lessons as well. Don't get the impression, however, that she devotes all her time to music, for she certainly doesn't. She was president of the G. A. A. at Greeley and was a member of the Tennis Club."

"But speaking of athletics, there's a portrait of one of the most prominent sophomore athletes, Charlotte Rudy."

When we turned to look at the picture of which our guide was speaking, we found the face of a smiling, merry-eyed maiden twinkling at us from behind the glass.

"You know," our guide continued, "she received her first swimming tape the second time that she was in our Lake View pool."

"Not really!" we exclaimed.

The guide nodded. "Yes, and she almost has her G. A. A. letter. She needs to complete only two more requirements. Besides wearing a proficiency pin, she has a bronze honor pin."

"What course does she take?" we inquisitively asked.

Our never-tiring guide replied, "A General Language Course with Latin. Latin's her favorite subject. Over at Greeley she was secretary of the S. O. S., which is composed entirely of especially appointed Latin students."

"Wonder if she will be a famous athlete or a Latin teacher?" we remarked.

"Neither," was the surprising answer of our guide. "She intends to be a commercial artist."

"What, a girl!" we gasped, and moved on.

The guide called to us from another part of the room devoted to statuary. "Here, you must see these two inseparable companions. They are John Amberg and Gerhard Seidel. Over at Greeley they were Mr. Fowler's right-hand men."

"John is now a member of the track team, plays the snare drum in the beginners' band, and would rather swim than eat. His ambition is to be a chemist.

"Gerhard, Mr. Fowler's other hand, is a football enthusiast and is on both the football team and the track team. He grew up in the Alcott School, and at some future time hopes to be an eloquent representative of the bar."

Suddenly, as if in answer to an unspoken question, our guide turned and pointed to a very large picture. "That group of boys in uniform compose the R. O. T. C.," he announced. "Most of them are mere juniors and seniors, of course, but a few are leaders among the sophomores. Lake View's R. O. T. C. is a splendid organization. It hopes to take first place in the sixth corps area contest held in June. It keeps them busy studying formation movements, drill and combat principles, arm and hand signals, rifle practice, athletics, first aid, scouting and patrolling, map reading, and interior guard duty.

"You know," our guide went on, pointing to another large picture, of girls this time, "the late shift keeps the sophomores out of many clubs that they would ordinarily join. But this year the girls did something that shows of what splendid material these sophomores are. They organized a Girl Reserve group of their own. Every Thursday, third period, they gathered in the girls' gym annex and conducted their meetings. It meant getting up and leaving home early, but they did it faithfully, for the fun they had compensated them. They didn't play all the time, of course, their work was carried on very much like that of the Senior Girl Reserves.

With a sudden suspicion that we had spent hours in the gallery, we looked at our watches. Our fears were confirmed, and we had to hurry away. Our exceedingly kind and informative pilot led us back through the winding labyrinth. On the way he told us some of the general characteristics of the group we had once so scornfully designated as "Sophs." Never again will we dare to snub them. Never before had we realized the importance of this section of the school. Carefully and deliberately, these people choose Lake View as their school, and, once they arrive, they are eager and ambitious to do for it all that is in their power. They are anxious to join clubs, to become members of the Honor Society, even to carry five subjects. No wonder Lake View's ideals have been upheld for so many years with these people constantly replacing those who graduate.

It was with a feeling of regret that we said good-bye to our guide and stepped out of the dim galleries into the bright sunshine and down the wide stone steps, as he called a parting word to us: "Remember, you were all sophs once!"

These sophomores have set a pace
For the ones who'll take their place.

Their work and high ambitions show,
Their progress we will surely know.

They'll hitch their wagon to a star,
Watch them, for they're going far.

GREELEY

WITHIN the rather drab outer covering of Greeley, we find a live, colorful organization. The colorful side manifests itself in the many posters we find hanging in the corridors.

Here is one poster that has a clever design extolling the virtues of the opera, The Student Prince. The S. O. S. act as hallguards during all periods. Among their many other duties, they take care of the "lost and found," returning all wandering pens, pencils, and gym suits to their respective owners. The slogan, "The floors at all times must be clean," seems to be drilled into the S. O. S., and every scrap of paper that is dropped on the floor turns on an electric current that makes the nearest S. O. S. stoop over and pick it up.

Next comes a poster that has emblazoned upon it, "Hitch your wagon to a star; aim for the Honor Society." Greeley, though it is made up of 1B's and 1A's struggling to get in step with high school life, is represented in the Honor Society this semester by a membership of thirty-five.

Mary Jane Powers of Division Room 13 heads this list with thirty-four points. Brown hair, brown eyes, and a flashing smile contribute to her charming personality. She simply dotes on baseball; and anyone that can give the ball a good, clean, hard knock over the fence is her hero. She is a member of the S. O. S., of course, and an ardent Camp Fire Girl. She has secured her Wood-gatherer's ring. She is an expert in all these activities, but when she managed to get thirty-four points, she suddenly switched flags and shrugged her shoulders like a Parisienne.

Next, a huge poster, gay with all the colors of the rainbow and made of a veritable kaleidoscope of greens, purples, yellows, reds, and oranges shows a topsy-turvy clown announcing the Greeley G. A. A. Circus, a real, honest-to-goodness circus with three rings and a side show. The circus is an annual affair and always draws crowds, for the voices of the peanut, the pink-lemonade, the popcorn, and the candy-vendors can be heard all the way down to the basement. The gym, where the circus takes place, is on the third floor. One of the stunts was a trapeze act with girls flitting from bar to bar like birds. The name of this was Tarzanites. Oh, yes, there was a "Horse" Greeley (you know it's derived from Hor'ce Greeley). Some G. A. A. girls made everyone think they were having a nightmare with an outlandish rig of some kind called an elephansy and with just dozens of interesting things including a Mutt show.

The G. A. A. this semester claims seventy-five per cent of the Greeley girls as members—a very good percentage. The officers are very capable, as are the twenty-two delegates.

Next we saw a whole row of well-colored and beautifully executed drawings made by the Special Arts group. This group was busy every minute of the day, for they made practically all the posters needed for the varied activities, including the Soap and Towel Fund and the Glee Club. Besides all these projects they had their regular work to do; but it does not seem so hard when one works with a group, as Jane Chrisman (Betty "Commissioner" Chrisman's sister—she looks just like Betty, too) assured us.

After this there was a poster announcing a new branch of the Girl Reserve Group of Lake View, which the Greeley girls seem to welcome. It is also a pet project of Miss Mullin's. No officers have as yet been selected; the present sponsor is Mrs. Chrisman.

"Join the Orchestra" stands out on the next poster. This musical organization, sponsored by Mrs. Grisard, is made up of seventeen members. At the end of the September-to-January semester, it lost five members, but recruited six new ones. It played for the music assembly in the main building, presenting March Militaire by Schubert, Andante by Haydn, and Norwegian Dance by Greig, with which it concluded the program.

On January 15, in connection with its sister organization, the Glee Club, it gave a program of musical selections consisting of Song Without Words by Schubert, Largo by Handel, La Cavantine by Bohn, In the Mill by Gillette, and the Ballet from Rosamunde.

Last semester the Greeley Glee Club had a large membership of forty-seven and a repertoire of over ten pieces. Marie Nash (Kathie in The Student Prince) was the soloist. The Glee Club also took part in the music assembly, singing a group of folk songs—Swing Low, Sweet Chariot; Good-bye, My Lover, Good-bye; Carry Me Back to Old Virginia; Who's That A-Calling; and Down Mobile. Then came February first, when twenty-three members, including Marie Nash, advanced to the main building. Mrs. Grisard saw all her 2B singers go, and she watched a group of girls and boys, just fresh from grammar school, come in; but the unexpected happened, for even though Greeley's membership was almost cut in half, the membership of the Glee Club was not affected—in fact it rose to forty-eight.

This semester it contains several unusually good voices, that of Marion Parkinson and Ada Proboner, lyric sopranos; Ruth Geshart, mezzo-soprano, and Elizabeth Klein, contralto.

An energetic person, Elizabeth Klein; blonde, blue-eyed and athletic, she fairly snaps with energy. She likes a fast game of baseball, thinking there is nothing like it to cheer one up. She is peeved by nothing except, like all Elizabeths, the nickname of "Liz." She desires nothing except to have the Captain Ball Team which she heads to come out on top.

There is also a Piano Club this semester with ten members, all of whom are progressing rapidly.

Another poster tells about the band, which, this semester, under the direction of Captain Walz, is being well grounded in the fundamentals, and is preparing for advanced work in the band at the main building. A poster asking for volunteers for the R. O. T. C. was next. Greeley's corps is Company "D," under the command of Captain Griffith. It puts up some stiff competition for the other companies, and it won several awards.

The Greeley faculty this year has had a radical change: Mr. Fowler, who had been in charge, was promoted to a principalship. He had held the reins for some time and was well liked by everyone. All Lake View was sorry to see him go. May we take this opportunity to express a few best wishes to a friend of youth and a kindly counsellor.

Miss Mullin, who took his position, has already proved herself a very capable administrator, and the Greeleyites have found that they can look to her for help in solving all their problems.

Thus, we have seen a little of the prospering life of Greeley. It truly upholds the highest of Lake View standards.

In September the pupils and teachers of the main building will welcome the incoming boys and girls from Greeley. They hope that the former branch people will have no difficulty in adjusting themselves to their new life; that they will determine from the very first day to succeed in all their studies; that they will feel free to join the many clubs in Lake View; and that they will wisely select their friends.

RAVENSWOOD

WE WALKED north along Paulina Street, our eyes eagerly seeking the first glimpse of our dear old Alma Mater. The street is lined with giant elm trees and enfolded in the greatest, coolest, and most magnificent of these is Ravenswood School. On either end of this dark-red brick building is a spacious, sunny campus. Here we stopped to watch an exciting game of baseball and recalled the good old days when we had disported ourselves in like manner.

We went inside the school and were amazed at the beautifully spotless condition of the wide corridors. We watched students open their shiny lockers without books and papers flying out! Mirabile dictu!

Then a bell rang, and in a few minutes all was quiet. It was division period. We went to Miss Eiberg's office on the second floor, where there was quite a bit of activity. With her charming smile, Miss Eiberg explained to us that these bustling pupils were the deputies. They were selling tickets for The Student Prince, and very successfully, too. The deputies from each room make up the Commission. We interviewed them and found them to be seven interesting, likeable, and friendly people. There are about three hundred students at Ravenswood, all of whom are pursuing four-year courses, General Language for the most part. These facts combine to inspire a unified and friendly group with a coöperative school spirit.

Arthur Bartmann, the deputy from Room 1, which ranks first in scholarship, is interested in pharmacy. His favorite sport is basketball—he plays center on the Ravenswood team—and wishes to play on the team at the main building in the fall.

Edward Mitchell, the Commissioner from Room 2, is interested in baseball and other sports. His ambition is to be sports editor of the Red and White.

Katherine Panko is the choice of Room 3. Her chief occupation seems to be that of representing her classmates, for she is a G. A. A. delegate and is president of Room 3 Club.

Glen Schmidt, in addition to being the deputy from Room 4, is captain of gym team 4 and president of the Aviation Club.

John Pachterm, the secretary-treasurer of this club, told us of a contest held on April 8. The airplane-gliders, which the members had constructed, were tested for endurance in flight. John is much interested in aviation and hopes to organize such a club at the main building next semester.

Room 5 sends as its representative Robert Eid. He enjoys baseball and confided that English is very much his pet peeve.

Dan Houghton is Commissioner from Room 6. Although he is only a "freshie" (so tradition labels the 1B's), he assumes a leading rôle in Ravenswood life. Dan is among the group of future aviators and plays in the band besides.

Ravenswood is justly proud of her band. The boys are very much interested and have made wonderful progress, despite the fact that Captain Walz can be with them only two days each week. On the other days they are assisted by members of the Lake View Concert Band.

Grace Kaiser is the deputy from Room 7. She is also the leader of the music group in the Girl Reserves, of which Miss Eiberg is the sponsor.

This thriving organization is entirely distinct from that within the portals of Lake View. Its pretty blonde president is Lois Ulrich, who is taking a Social Science Course. Lois doesn't like to be teased, nor does her colleague in office, Ethel Enderle, the vice-president. Her dislike of teasing is limited to that concerning her enchanting dimples.

Helen Anspaugh is secretary of the Girl Reserves. She has embarked upon a General Language course with Latin and is a member of the Honor Society.

Jeanne Keller is treasurer and she also belongs to the Honor Society.

The other important girls' club is the G. A. A., of which nearly every girl is a member. Elizabeth Swanson is the president of this organization. We heard that her favorite sports are swimming and talking. She herself told us that she plans to study chemistry when she comes to Lake View. She wears an honor pin.

Then we were introduced to the treasurer of the G. A. A., Ida May Hoffman, who earned thirty-four points in the Honor Society; she received S in every subject and was neither absent nor tardy throughout the semester. She is interested in botany and hopes to join the Botany Club at the main building next semester.

Gwendolyn Zipperli is manager of the G. A. A. Volleyball is her favorite sport. Gwendolyn has black hair and blue eyes, and she plays the piano and the violin.

Another musical artist is Harriet Smith. It is she who plays the piano-accordion beautifully at the assemblies. Harriet is very shy, but we have learned that she has earned an honor pin, and that she likes to draw. We hope to see more of her next year.

Of course we were anxious to interview Lake View's future athletic heroes. Edward Anderson is captain of team 5, the winning team. He plays the saxophone in the band and is a Special Arts student. His favorite sport is basketball.

Alexander Topp, the captain of team 2, also aspires to the basketball team. Daniel Satenstein, the leader of team 6, declared naïvely but emphatically that when he reached the main building, he was going to work and go out for track.

Arbid Larson's team 1 is a winning team. Burton Dahlke is captain of team 3. Both Arbid and Burton hope to be members of the baseball team when they become sophomores next year. We have a very well-founded belief that Lake View's athletic teams are going to receive valuable additions next semester.

Other organizations besides athletic groups will be enlarged. We foresee a swelling of sales of both Lake View publications when Jack Hershey and Harold Kruger come into our midst. They are respectively the Lake re View and Red and White managers at Ravenswood.

Have you wondered how Ravenswood can be such a flourishing branch when her students remain only a year? The 1A's, or freshmen, participate in the greater part of the extra-curricular activities and at the same time introduce the "freshies" to the joys of high school life. Thus it is that Irene Bowyer, who is the present editor of the Ravenswood column in the Lake re View, has been training an assistant who will be in full charge next semester. Irene is another four S student. She is taking a General Science course. Her able assistant is Robert Webb, who is most capable in things literary, and earns Honor Society grades, to say nothing of his modest ambition to attain distinction in football, swimming, and golf.

Literary, athletic, and scholastic organizations await these newcomers from Ravenswood. Variety is the spice of life, they say, and old Lake View always welcomes new blood and fresh enthusiasm. Every semester fresh energy pours into her veins from her two branches, livening up the various activities. After all, every one of the important people at the main building came from the branches. Ravenswood, especially, has contributed its share of the famous populace of Lake View; thus it is that the sophomores from Ravenswood are more than welcome—they are eagerly awaited, for they present scintillating possibilities in material.

The next day, when the girls called at the hospital to inquire about the patient, they were registered at the desk by Beorgevin Becksted. Hurrying down the hall they nearly ran down Myron Gerber, an interne. Barely stopping to apologize to this new victim of their craze for speed, they rushed on and into George's room. He seemed quite well and on the road to recovery. After their suspense had been relieved, they noticed Jake Frank standing in one corner.

"Greetings!" someone cried. "What are you doing here?"

"I'm his nurse," he said.

Everyone who saw the Student Prince (and who didn't?) has commented on the lovely costumes which were worn by the actors and actresses those three gala nights at Lake View.

Dashing soldiers, gay young damsels in peasant costumes, jaunty students and lovely ladies, all costumed in colorful and rich apparel which helped so much in making Lake View's Opera a huge and brilliant success.

These costumes all came from—
